500 Menace Struck Plant; Mayor Asks Aid in Vain

Masked Men Wreck Machinery in Electrical Firm's Kenton, O., Factory

Galion, Ohio, Oct. 22 (AP).—The Mayor of Galion tonight appealed fruitlessly for State Highway Patrol aid to forestall possible violence at the strikebound North Electric Co. plant here, while a mob estimated unofficially at 500 men milled around the factory.

Predawn marauders had wreaked extensive damage at the firm's Kenton, Ohio, plant.

There a band of 20 to 30 masked men overpowered the watchman and smashed machinery with iron bars, Police Chief C. W. Sheldon reported. The plant does not have an agreement with a union.

The chief said the damage was "extensive" and the plant was not able to open today.

The company, which manufactures telephone switchboards, has strike-bound plants at Galion and Mount Gilead, Ohio.

R. K. McBerty, of Galton, vice president of the company, said he does not believe the marauders were Kenton residents. The Kenton plant employes about 200 persons.

Appeal Turned Down

The Governor's office turned down the Galion appeal because the State police have no authority in strike matters unless local authorities report the situation out of control.

Police Chief James L. Walker said most of the men marching up and down outside the plant were "carrying blackjacks."

The chief said he "had heard on good authority" the Galion plant would be stormed during the night."

Mayor William Amann made the appeal for help tonight after hearing the chief's report and looking over the situation outside the plant.

The mayor said eight police officers, Sheriff Ralph Frecht and two deputies were on the scene.

3d Drivers Abducted

As Chief Walker reported the threat of violence, he also disclosed two company truck drivers—Richard Lyons, 25, and John Mathias, 23, both of Galion—had been abducted this morning and held prisoner for 2½ hours. Three men later were arrested in the case by State police.

Walker said he also had ordered the city fire department to string fire hoses around the plant with instructions to pour streams of water "to break up any mobs moving on the plant."

A temporary court injunction prevents the CIO United Auto Workers, who are seeking union recognition and wage increases, from having more than six pickets at each gate of the plant, which normally employs around 750 men.

It has been strike-bound since August 20, but a "back-to-work" movement developed there last week an dcompany officials claim around 300 employes now report for duty daily.

Edward Duck, Galion-Mansfield area international representative, of the CIO United Auto Workers, said a pistol shot was fired within the plant grounds about 4:30 p. m. today.

Duck estimated there were 120 production workers and 160 offices employes in the plant and said 340 other production workers were on strike.

"We want a signed contract, but the company refused to negotiate. We offered to mediate with a three-man mediation board," Duck said, adding that his union "positively disclaimed any responsibility for what happened at Kenton this morning."

He said the International Brotherhood of Electricians (AFL) had tried to organize that plant.

Duck also asserted that Dr. Edward Brown, Marion, Ohio, Methodist minister and member of the American Arbitration Association, had offered his services free but the company had declined.

Several people, including one elderly woman, were removed from the plant in ambulances, and members of the surging crowd complained that it was a company method to "sneak out people by playing sick."

Women Cheer Robert Taylor As He Urges Ban on Reds

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Robert Taylor, famed screen lover, yesterday asked Congress to outlaw the Communist Party while hundreds of women fans wildly cheered him on.

The women—bobby soxers, mothers and children, and grandmothers—stood in line for hours waiting for the 36-year-old Nebraska-born film star to appear before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

When Taylor, preceded by a battery of motion pictures and newspaper photographers, started to enter the marble-walled caucus room of the Old House Office Building, the women surged forward and piled up at the door in an immovable mass.

Capitol police were almost helpless in the face of the feminine onslaught.

Wooden barricades were hastily flung up to keep a passage clear. There were seats for 391 spectators filled mostly by women. Hundreds more, disappointed at not gaining admission, wound around the corridors waiting for a glimpse of the film star.

There was testimony yesterday about the Communists in Hollywood.

There were other developments but so far as the crowd was concerned it was Robert Taylor day.

Today the investigation into communism in Hollywood will co-star Robert Montgomery and Gary Cooper, who like Taylor, have been battling the spread of Red facism in the movie capital.

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) announced after a closed session yesterday that the committee will present two mystery witnesses Monday whose testimony will link the Communist Party with espionage.

Thomas said the evidence would be "sensational" and was connected with previous testimony concerning the disclosure of military

Leaders Meet Today on Aid For Europe

Special Session Problem May Be Decided at White House Talks

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman and congressional leaders tackle the problem of stop-gap aid to Europe again this afternoon, and may decide whether a special session of Congress is necessary.

Mr. Truman will hold a news conference afterward at a time yet to be announced.

Government financial experts have been exploring ways to supply France, Italy and other distressed countries with food and fuel without the necessity of a special session. One plan is to have the Commodity Credit Corporation continue sending wheat and other food products to these countries even after they run out of dollars, and not rush them into paying the bill.

Leaders' Approval Necessary

Mr. Truman almost certainly would want the acquiescence of congressional leaders before adopting any such plan.

If the leaders are agreeable, Mr. Truman would like to get a promise from them that an appropriation for stop-gap aid would be made the very first order of business when Congress meets in regular session January 3.

If the Republican leadership in Congress is not willing to go along, a special session would appear to be in order. Mr. Truman has always said that he would favor one if it were necessary.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) will be at the White House when the conference starts at 2:30 p. m., and his views naturally will carry great weight. At the time of the last such conference, on September 29, Taft was in the West, canvassing his chances of winning the Republican nomination for President.

He told reporters at the time that some "ingenious person" ought to be able to find credits for Europe in various Government agencies, and thus avoid the necessity of a special session. Among the agencies he mentioned were the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Export-Import Bank.

Truman Given All Facts

House Speaker Joseph W. Martin also will be at the White House this afternoon. Like Taft, he was on a speaking tour at the time of the last such conference.

The White House yesterday announced that among the others who will attend are Senators White (R., Me.), Barkley (D., Ky.), Connally (D., Tex.), and Ferguson (R., Mich.), who will be substituting for Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) who is overseas.

Representatives will include Halleck (R., Ind.), Eaton (R., N. J.), Bloom (D., N. Y.), Herter (R., Mass.), and Wolcott (R., Mich.).

Acting Serretary of State Robert A. Lovett said yesterday that all the State Department's data on the European emergency, and on possible methods of meeting it, had been sent to the White House. He indicated that the President would have all the relevant facts and figures when he met the congressional leaders.

Asked about further help for Italy, Lovett replied that the Pres-

Communists and Sympathisers Told to Wreck Marshall Plan; Byrnes Urges German Parley

West Is Urged To Call Peace Parley Regardless Of Soviet Stand

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 22 (AP).—Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes proposed tonight that the United States, Britain and France act "now" to call a full-dress German peace conference regardless of the attitude of Russia.

Byrnes, in effect, predicted failure of the Big Four foreign ministers conference in London next month. He argued that Russia had proved its unwillingness to cooperate in a generally acceptable German peace settlement and asserted the three western nations would have to call a German conference of victor nations a year from now anyway.

"If they are going to do it a year hence," he said, "why not do it now?"

Words Echo His Book

He outlined his views on the next peace-making moves in an address prepared for a meeting of South Carolina fraternal groups here under Masonic sponsorship.

His words followed in general, but in more detail, the pattern proposed in his book "Speaking Frankly." In this he suggested the United States and the other powers make peace without Russia, if Russia will not cooperate. He added that if Russia persisted then in holding eastern Germany, the other Allies if necessary should use measures of "last resort" under majority sponsorship of the United Nations Security Council.

"There is no suggestion," he said here, "as to whether such collective action should be persuasion, economic pressure or military action. That would be for the nations to determine under the circumstances existing at that time."

U. P. Report Criticized

Byrnes specifically denied what he described in his speech as a United Press report of his book. He said it presented him as an advocate of meeting Russian obstructionism with atomic bombs and ouster of the Red army from Germany by force if necessary.

He read several hundred words from his book on his suggestion for the German settlement, and said: "In it there is nothing about atomic bombs or driving the Soviets out of Germany by force."

At another point in his speech, he said the "title of warmonger" had been given him by Dmitri Manuilsky, Soviet Ukrainian delegate at the United Nations, "and that is one title I do not like."

"I heartily disapprove of talk of war against Russia and I have lost no opportunity to discourage talk of the inevitability of conflict," Byrnes declared.

[Today Deputy Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, in a United Nations speech, branded Byrnes a warmonger.—Editor's Note:]

The Soviet, Byrnes said, mainly wants two things out of Germany: first, 10 billion dollars in reparations out of current production; second, a share, along with Britain,

Speaking Frankly

Note From Stalin Offended Roosevelt, Byrnes Reveals

This is a serialization of James F. Byrnes' "Speaking Frankly"—6 of 15 chapters of the book published October 15, 1947, by Harper & Brothers. Copyright, 1947, by James F. Byrnes Foundation (a Charitable Trust).

By James F. Byrnes

ON March 11, the Allied Commander in Chief in Italy, Field Marshal Alexander, learned through the Office of Strategic Services that General Kesselring and several German staff officers were willing to meet in Switzerland to discuss the surrender of the German army in Italy. The Combined Chiefs of Staff approved Alexander's plan to send his deputy chief of staff to Bern, but instructed him to wait until the Soviet government was informed. When Ambassador Harriman gave this information to Mr. Molotov, the latter declared that the Soviet government wished to take part in any such discussions and would send three Red army officers. Thereupon, the Combined Chiefs of Staff informed the Soviet government that nothing would be done at Bern except to arrange for a meeting at Allied headquarters in Caserta, Italy, where the Soviet representatives would be welcome. The directive also instructed that it be made clear to the Soviet government that, should the Germans offer to surrender, Alexander as supreme commander on that front, would conduct the negotiations and make the necessary decisions.

The Soviet government replied that inasmuch as their officers could not participate in the discussions they would not be sent to Caserta. The message "insisted" that the negotiations be stopped.

Note From Stalin

A few days later Stalin sent a message to President Roosevelt stating that if the same situation had been presented on the Russian front he would not have objected to the participation of British and American representatives in the discussions. He recognized, he said, the great importance of the negotiation that had taken place because it affected the military situation on the Eastern Front.

President Roosevelt replied that no negotiations had taken place and assured Stalin that he would be kept fully informed. The next message from the Soviet leader was the one that deeply offended Mr. Roosevelt.

STALIN referred to the statement that no negotiations had taken place and asserted that it was evident the President had not been advised by his own military leaders. Stalin said the information given him by his Red army advisers showed that negotiations had been completed and that, as a result of them, Kesselring was going to open up the German front to permit the American Army to advance. In return for this military assistance, Stalin said, the United States and Britain had

Stalin Aide Says 'Hitlerites' in U. S. Are Seeking New 'Military Adventures'

Moscow, Oct. 22 (AP).—Andrei A. Zhdanov in a declaration published today called upon Communists and their sympathizers everywhere in the world to join in a battle against what he charged were attempts by the United States to achieve "world domination by American imperialism."

Zhdanov, member of the Soviet Politburo and prominently mentioned as a probable successor to Stalin, said Russia would take the lead in attempts to wreck the Marshall Plan and prevent the United States from making Europe a "forty-ninth State."

He compared the "ruling circles" of the United States with "Hitlerites," and said America was following a policy of preparing for "new military adventures."

"No Appeasement" Note

His remarks were contained in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda disclosing for the first time his summation of the international situation before the nine-nation conference in Poland which led to creation of the nine-nation International Communist Information Bureau in Belgrade.

"As the Munich policy in the past untied Hitler's hands for aggression, so concessions to the new course of the United States and the imperialist camp can only make its inspirers more impertinent and aggressive," Zhdanov declared.

At the same time he said Soviet foreign policy was based on the existence of the two systems of capitalism and socialism for a period of long duration.

"The possibility of collaboration between the Soviet Union and the countries of other systems proceed from this theory," he said.

He divided his summation into four parts; the postwar world situation, the emergence of "imperialistic" and "democratic" camps after the war, the American plan for "enslaving Europe" and the task of the Communist parties to unite "democratic, anti-Fascist, peace-loving elements" against new plans for "war and aggression."

His thesis on the United States was this:

Before the Second World War United States "imperialists" followed an isolationist policy, but in the new postwar period "Wall Street bosses launched a new policy.

"They put forth a program of using all their military aid and economic might, not only to hold onto but to strengthen the foreign positions in the war period and to expand—replacing Germany and Japan with America in the world market."

Lists "Anti-Fascists"

He pictured "American reactionaries" as alarmed at success of socialism in the Soviet Union and elsewhere and said they were taking upon themselves the job of "rescuing the capitalistic system from communism."

"Like Hitlerites, the contemporary ruling circles of the United States disguise their expansion program and even their offensive on the vital interests of the weaker imperialistic competitor Britain with a so-called anti-Communist program," he went on.

He charged that the main objective of this camp was to prepare for "a new imperialistic war—a struggle with socialism and democracy and support of reactionary and antidemocratic, pro-Fascist regimes everywhere."

He said that in addition to Russia the countries of Yugoslavia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Albania, Romania, Hungary—and Finland partly—were in the anti-Fascist front. He said Indonesia and the Viet-Nam Republic of Indo-China were joining and that India, Egypt and Syria "sympathize with it."

He said the United States Army now ranked in "first place" among capitalist countries, and that military strategy of the United States included creation of bases far from American shores for "aggressive use against the Soviet Union and countries of the new democracy."

"Britain and France are in alliance with the United States," he

3 More Called In Arlington Gaming Probe

Grand Jury to Hear 14 in Investigation Of County Police

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

Two more witnesses were subpenaed yesterday and papers issued on a third in an Arlington grand jury investigation of charges that county police have failed or refused to crack down on gambling.

The grand jury meets at 10 a. m. today to hear testimony of the three and of 14 other witnesses summoned Monday.

Process was completed yesterday on Roy Armbrewster, 34, of 4314 Lee hwy., Arlington, and on William E. Heflin, 30, who lives at 625 Jefferson ave., Falls Church.

The Arlington sheriff's office also issued a subpena for Mrs. Ethel Zirkle of 1124 N. Randolph st., Arlington, but the process had not been served last night.

Cabman "Knows Plenty"

The investigation was touched off last week after Arlington police raided an alleged county numbers headquarters on the complaint of William R. Smith, former county policeman.

At the time, Arlington County Board Member Daniel A. Dugan complained of the "failure or refusal" of police officials to crack down on gambling, and demanded the investigation.

Armbrewster, one of the witnesses subpenaed yesterday, is a driver for a county cab company, and a resident of the county for 13 years. He told a Washington Post reporter yesterday that he "knew plenty" about local gambling activities.

Heflin, the other witness summoned yesterday operates a radio repair shop in space leased from the Greenwood Service Station, 4505 Lee hwy., Arlington.

Expressing surprise that he had been summoned as a grand jury witness, he gave as one possible reason the fact that up until six months ago, he had rented a small building at 3147 N. Washington blvd. for a repair shop. The structure is now the news stand of ex-policeman William R. Smith, whose protests launched the grand jury investigation.

1700 Launch U. S. Workers' Chest Drive

Library of Congress Announces Its Quota Is Oversubscribed

The Community Chest Federation's campaign among Federal workers was launched yesterday at a "kickoff" rally in the Departmental Auditorium.

An estimated 1700 volunteer solicitors and Government officials turned out for pep talks by Undersecretary of the Navy W. John Kenney, chairman of the Government unit, and Undersecretary of Commerce William C. Foster, vice chairman.

Workers were spurred by an announcement that the Library of Congress already has subscribed 101.4 per cent of its goal. Some 1368 employes of the library already have pledged a total of $11,455.05, the audience was informed by Xenophon Smith, chairman of the Library's drive.

Hard Work Asked

"The Government unit quota has been set at $1,357,800 and to be successful it will necessitate hard work on your part—thorough coverage and the careful canvassing of every prospective contributor," Kenney declared.

He expressed gratification at the "response to my request for active and capable leadership" and added:

"It is my hope that by the date of the first report meeting on November 12, a goodly number of departments and agencies will be over the top and our general campaign will report more than 50 per cent of our goal. If we can do this, I predict a rapid and successful campaign in the Government unit."

Undersecretary of Commerce Foster pointed out that "the goal we have set will not be easy to reach, but the importance of reaching it is vital." He said he felt "we can put the job over."

Esther Williams Appears

Esther Williams, swimming star of the movies, appeared at the rally and spoke briefly.

In another meeting in behalf of the drive, representatives of some 50 men's civic clubs in the Greater Washington area convened at the Hotel Mayflower to see movies and hear speeches on the forthcoming campaign among business units, to be launched November 6.

Creedon Rejects Rent Boost On Florida Negro Housing

Court Rules Union Must Protect Rights Of All-Under Contract

St. Petersburg Bid Held Based on Race And Contrary to Act

Baltimore, Oct. 22 (AP).—A United States Circuit Court of Appeals today ruled that a union is responsible for protecting all workers governed by its contracts from racial discrimination, even if the union does not admit Negroes to membership.

The court's decision was against the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (independent), which had appealed from a lower court decision awarding $1000 in damages to Tom Tunstall, a Negro locomotive fireman on the Norfolk & Southern Railroad.

Judges Morris A. Soper, John J. Parker and Armistead M. Dobie held that the brotherhood is official bargainining agent for the Negro employes but had agreed to contract provisions that would eventually eliminate Negro firemen from the service of the company.

"The fact that the railroads have discriminated against Negroes in the matter of promotability," the opinion said, "does not justify the Brotherhood which represents them as bargaining agent in making a further discrimination based on that discrimination."

The court referred to the fact that Negro firemen, unable to get the position of Engineer, frequently accumulate seniority which would normally entitle them to more desirable runs than white firemen with less seniority.

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A proposal to increase rent levels for Negro housing units in the St. Petersburg, Fla., area was rejected yesterday by Housing Expediter Frank R. Creedon.

He said such an increase, which would have been based on the race or color of the tenant, was "discriminatory and contrary to the Housing and Rent Act of 1947."

In other action, Creedon permitted a 10 per cent rent increase in the Klamath Falls, Oreg., area and the complete decontrol of rents for Ottawa County, Kans.

In the first instance, he found that there had been a 50 per cent increase in the tax levy, and similar increases of building, heating and maintenance costs. In the second case, he found that the need for control no longer existed because the demand for rental units had been "reasonably" met. He also pointed out that the proposal for decontrol, made by the local rent advisory board, followed a public hearing on the subject, and was accompanied by a report that the decontrol would not result in an increase of the general rent level.

The recommendation to jump rents of Negro tenants in St. Petersburg area had been made by the local rent advisory board. It asked for an increase of 25 cents per week per room where no water was furnished, and 35 cents per week per room where the landlord supplied water.

'Plan' Is Just Taking Form, Marshall Says

In Drafting Stage, Secretary Explains To New York Forum

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Secretary of State Marshall said tonight the so-called "Marshall Plan" now is only in the drafting stage, and "when it is completed it will truly be a program of the United States Government, and not of any one department or agency."

Marshall spoke to the New York Herald Tribune Forum, which heard a letter from President Truman declaring that "this Nation cannot know full peace or full security" unless the people of Europe "are in a position to make their full contribution to world stability."

The President's letter to Mrs. Ogden Reid, president of the Herald Tribune, said that on the decisions of the coming weeks and months "will depend in large measure the future pattern of our relations with Europe and, indeed, with the world at large."

"Within Our Strength"

He said this country must be sure "that what we are undertaking to do is within the limits of our own strength, and does not run counter to the health of our own economic life."

Marshall told the forum that no project "has ever received more careful study and preparation than has this problem of the reconstruction of Europe.

"And I am certain that no governmental effort has ever enjoyed such complete cooperation on the part of all the agencies concerned.

"There has been constant reference to a Marshall Plan," he said. "The reference to me personally was unfortunate, but the reference to a plan was definitely misleading. There was no plan. There was a

Cabinet Quits As French Crisis Mounts

Ramadier Renames 12 of 24 Ministers For Interim Rule

By William J. Humphreys

Paris, Oct. 22 (NXHT).—Premier Paul Ramadier's cabinet of 24 ministers resigned this afternoon under pressure from:

1. Gen. Charles de Gaulle's municipal election victory Sunday and
2. Communist-controlled trade union demands for wage increases of more than 50 per cent.

Ramadier, who represents the continuity of the government, did not himself resign, and therefore the resignations did not, in a technical sense, constitute a fall of the government.

Instead, the premier formed another smaller cabinet to deal with the emergency until the National Assembly meets October 28. His new government consisted of one minister of state, 10 ministers with portfolios and one secretary of state.

Its members were all in the previous cabinet and in reduction was therefore more striking than its political composition.

The new cabinet:

Minister of state, Yvon Delbros (Radical Socialist); minister of foreign affairs, George Bidault (M. R. P.); minister of justice, Andre Marie (Radical Socialist); minister of armed formces, Pierre-Henri Teitgen (M. R. Many Bins Empty

Building Construction in D. C. Hampered by Nail Shortage

Building construction in the District has been drastically curtailed, and in some cases halted, by an increasing nail shortage.

A survey of local distributors, suppliers and contractors yesterday revealed that many bins are empty while others have only enough supplies for a week.

Frank Cortwright, executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders, attributed the growing shortage to declining production in recent months.

While in January of this year, national output was 77,000 tons, the figure was down to 64,000 in June, 58,000 in July, and 63,000 in August, Cortright said. No figures were availble for September.

Other reasons for the production drop, Cortright said, were the scarcity of steel, the fact that nails are not a high profit item, and the "outrageous prices demanded by unscrupulous dealers holding supplies off the regular market." He called the practice of selling nails normally priced at $5 a keg at $12 and $13 a "gray market."

A. Allan Muse, partner in the Chevy Chase Realty & Development Co., said that although his firm has completed 20 homes since the end of the last war, construction is now at a complete standstill.

W. S. Banks, president of Banks & Lee, Inc., one of the larger District builders who normally uses about a carload of nails every six weeks, said yesterday that they were "very scarce." He has a staff of four men who do nothing but "scout" about Eastern cities following the nail market. "If a town is slow, we hit it and catch what we can," he explained.

Forrestal to Senators

Total Mobilization Program Being Planned for Next War

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Plans to mobilize the Nation's total economy speedily and effectively if another war comes, possibly by legislation enacted in advance, yesterday were discussed by the country's top war planners.

James Forrestal, National Defense Secretary, and Thomas J. Hargrave, Munitions Board chairman, told the Senate War Investigating Committee of plans and directives now being drafted.

Their views varied only on the timing of implementing legislation. Hargrave thought basic mobilization legislation should be enacted by the next Congress, before an actual war emergency, and set in motion when and if one develops.

Forrestal saw no need for advance enactment, but agreed bills implementing war plans now being drawn should be ready for instant submission. Conceding shortcomings in the never fully invoked 1939 war plan, he blamed subsequent production and manpower bottlenecks on between-wars "indifference" to military preparedness.

In another war, Forrestal said, "we would have to go much further in substituting war production for civilian production."

A third witness, Ferdinand Eberstadt, former advisory chairman of the WPB, said America ignored at the war's start proven mobilization techniques, but got around to

Secrets Leak Story Absurd, Pilot Says

Magazine Article Cited at Hearing Had Air Forces Approval, He Declares

Rosamond, Calif., Oct. 22 (AP).—Chalmers (Slick) Goodlin, former Navy combat flier and Bell Aircraft test pilot, described today as "silly and without foundation" charges that he had permitted information on a new supersonic military plane to leak out.

"The whole thing is absurd," said Goodlin. He was referring to testimony of writer-critic John C. Moffitt before a House committee in Washington investigating Communist influences in Hollywood.

Moffitt said the information was obtained by Hollywood literary agent, John Weber, from a magazine article written by Goodlin.

"Never Heard of Moffitt"

"In the first place," said Goodlin, "every line of that article had been cleared with and approved by the Army Air Forces public relations section. They gave me the go-ahead and I turned the article over to the William Morris Agency (which employs Weber). I'm not sure, but I don't think Weber ever saw it. I dealt with someone else.

"I never heard of Moffitt before; I don't know yet who he is, and it's difficult to see how he would know anything about my business."

(In Washington, officers of the Air Force public relations section said Goodlin submitted an article entitled "Twenty Minutes of Eternity" which was approved after about half a dozen minor changes were made. They described the story as "perfectly harmless," saying it contained considerably less information than appeared in an official Air Force press release on the experimental airplane issued last December 15.)

Goodlin's article, which he said will appear in the January issue of an aviation magazine, deals with his experiences flying the XS-1, a Bell rocket plane designed to penetrate the supersonic speed barrier.

Moffitt testified yesterday that Goodlin had been "replaced" as test pilot. Goodlin declared last June, and reiterated today, that he had resigned his Bell position because of a contractual dispute.

Wants FBI Investigation

"I wish the FBI would take up the incident," Goodlin said. "Irresponsible testimony like Moffitt's can do a man a lot of harm."

Weber, who Moffitt said had been sent to Hollywood by Communist headquarters, described the charges as "malicious invention and slander."

"Goodlin came to us," he said, corroborating the young flier's statement. "He wanted us to market articles requested by national magazines. Our agency undertook some of this work. It was * * * our daily business. * * *

"I knew less about what Goodlin was doing than the average man in the street."

'Records Promised'

Thomas also announced that the committee will bring out this week or next the complete records of at least 79 Hollywood figures linked with the Communist conspiracy.

"These 79 people I mentioned," Thomas told reporters, "are not just run-of-the-mill small fry, but very prominent figures."

Taylor's testimony apparently cleared up one hotly disputed point.

He testified that he was not forced by any Government agency to make the picture "Song of Russia," a film to which he had objected.

"I must confess I objected strongly to "Song of Russia," he told the committee.

"In my personal opinion it contained Communist propaganda, although a lot of my friends didn't agree with me."

Wasn't "Forced," Says Taylor

Some changes were made in the script, Taylor said, to meet his objections.

The handsome film star said he did not believe the film would be made now, but that at the time he had agreed in deference to the situation existing (when the United States and Russia were military allies).

Taylor said he did not believe the picture had been scheduled at the suggestion of any Government representative. He said he had conferred in the office of L. B. Mayer of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Mayer and Lowell Mellett, then head of the motion picture branch of the Office of War Information, about the film.

The conversation lasted about five minutes, he said, and added that he gained the impression the Government was favorable to the idea of making the film.

"If I ever have given the impression that I was forced to make the picture, I want to say that I was not forced.

"I could not be forced to make any picture."

Testifies to "Abuse"

Representative Richard Nixon (R., Calif.) asked the actor if he had been subjected "to ridicule and abuse" by left-wing writers after he first testified on Communism before a subcommittee meeting in Hollywood last May.

"I'm afraid I was," Taylor replied blithely, "but that certainly didn't bother me any."

Asked if he thought he would be ridiculed and abused for yesterday's appearance, Taylor said "I suppose so," and blithely flung out a challenge.

"I take any attacks from the left-wing press or individuals as compliments. I really enjoy their dislike," he said with emphasis.

Nixon bluntly queried if the actor thought such attacks would injure him at the box office.

Faith in American People

"I happen to believe strongly enough in the American people to feel that they will go along with anyone who prefers the American system," Taylor said.

That brought the audience up cheering with cries of "Hurrah for Robert Taylor."

A few minutes later the screen star touched off another demonstration when he called for the outlawing of the Communist Party and added:

"If I had my way about the Communists they'd all be sent back to Russia or some other unpleasant place."

Thomas rapped for order and cautioned the audience against demonstrations.

Actor and Actress Named

Earlier, Taylor named actress Karen Morley and actor Howard De Silva as "disruptive influences" within the Screen Actor's Guild.

"Does any element in the Screen Actors Guild follow the Communist Party line?" Taylor was asked.

"Yes, sir, I must confess that I have seen this. I am a member of the board of directors and it seems that at general membership meetings some persons act in such a way as to indicate that if they are not Communists they are working awfully hard to be ones."

"Do they have a disruptive influence?"

"It seems so to me. On issues in which there is considerable agreement certain persons start seeming not to understand. They ask questions, raise points of order and so forth and keep the meetings running until 1 or 2 in the morning."

It was then that Taylor said that Howard De Silva and Karen Morley always seemed to be in that group.

Script Writer Named

Taylor said that Lester Cole, a script writer for MGM, was reputed to be a Communist, but added that he had no personal knowledge of that.

Cole is one of a group of 19 Hollywood figures represented by Robert Kenny, Bartley Crum and others who have been subpenaed to testify.

The screen star said he had never knowingly played on a set with a Communist and added, "And I never will."

"This may sound biased," he added, "but if I were ever scheduled to work with anyone I even suspected of being a Communist it would have to be either them or me."

Kenny promptly sent a note to the press tables that it is Cole who is the author of "The High Wall," Taylor's forthcoming picture.

"It is difficult to reconcile that with Taylor's statement," Kenny said.

Cole's Contract Renewed

An MGM representative later confirmed the fact that Cole's contract had been renewed since the hearings started here. He said that Taylor obviously was referring to people with whom he would have to work on the set and said that the movie star had every right to decline to work with people he found obnoxious. He added that script writers did not work on the sets with the actors.

Taylor said that 99.9 per cent of the people in Hollywood feel just as he does.

He said he believed the movie producers were doing everything they can to get rid of Communists.

If clearing Reds out of Hollywood were his own responsibility, the movie actor added:

"I'd love to fire every last one of them. If I ever produce a picture of my own—and I hope I never do—I wouldn't have one within a hundred miles of me, the studio or the script."

Producers have to be a little more "judicious," Taylor added.

Taylor Testifies Calmly

Taylor was calm and composed as he gave his testimony under the familiar glare of the klieg lights for busy motion picture cameras.

As Taylor lifted his hand to take the costomary oath to tell the truth, a photographer yelled:

"Get your hand back. You're hiding your face."

Taylor complied with the orders of his new "director."

"How long," queried Committee Secretary Robert E. Stripling, "have you been an actor, Mr. Taylor?"

"I have been employed as an actor since 1934," replied Taylor serenely.

Female giggles greeted the distinction.

Ignores Feminine Hubbub

Taylor wore a brown suit with red and white pen stripes for his appearance on the "congressional set."

He ignored the feminine hubbub his appearance created but was pursued from the room and into the street by scores of admirers.

He completed his testimony in 25 minutes and was escorted from the room by a police escort and members of the committee staff.

Only one of the autograph hunters besieging the star got an autograph.

She was 3-year-old Patti Borgiasz of Chicago who now has "Robert Taylor" written on her comic book.

Photographers spied pretty little Patti standing with her mother outside the House Office Building and asked Taylor to pose with her.

Patti and her mother, Mrs. William Borgiasz, are in Washington visiting Patti's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Janson, 3888 Porter st. nw.

Taylor was followed to the stand by Morrie Ryskind, co-author with George S. Kaufman of the Pulitzer prize winning "Of Thee I Sing."

"You'd have to be deaf, dumb and blind" not to know there are Communists in Hollywood, Ryskind said.

"And even then," he quipped, "if you used your nose you'd know the order was still there."

Ryskind attacked the Communists for obtaining money under false pretenses.

He told of giving money for the defense of the Scottsboro boys some years ago, because as a liberal he feared "the colored boys were not getting a square deal."

Three of Them Find Spanish Too Easy

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—It's "Como esta usted" for Yanks but "How do you do" for Latin Americans in the Naval Academy's Spanish Club.

Spanish is the only language tolerated at meetings of the mishipman's group—except for three members. They're from South America. So they speak English.

The Latin American middies say that otherwise there wouldn't be much point to it.

Screen Directors Guild Denies Red Activity

Hollywood, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—Testimony of Movie Director Sam Wood that Communist activities existed in the Screen Directors Guild was denied tonight by the guild's directors.

In a telegram to Representative Joseph W. Martin, Speaker of the House, and Chairman J. Parnell Thomas of the Un-American Activities Committee, President George Stevens and the guild's directors said:

"The board of directors of the Screen Directors' Guild feels called upon to deny the testimony of Mr. Sam Wood regarding Communistic activity in the Screen Directors' Guild, and it is our considered belief that Mr. Wood's remarks are without foundation."

Leftist Says Menjou Met Soviet Envoy

London, Oct. 22 (AP).—Denis N. Pritt, Leftist independent member of Parliament, told newsmen today he introduced Film Actor Adolphe Menjou to Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky here during the war after Menjou described himself as "a devoted friend to the Soviet Union."

Menjou attacked Russian leaders at a hearing of the House Committee on Un-American Activities in Washington yesterday. He described Hollywood as "one of the main centers of Communist activity in America."

Pritt said the introduction of Menjou and Maisky was made by the actor's request June 10, 1943, "at a special pre-first night performance of 'The Russians' at the Playhouse Theater, London, in aid of the Stalingrad Hospital."

"They had a long and friendly conversation and were photographed together," Pritt said. "Mr. Menjou asked particularly to be supplied with copies of the photograph and was so supplied and wrote a letter of thanks in cordial terms."

Iran Rejects Red Demands For Oil Fields

Tehran, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—The Iranian parliament (Majlis) voted 102 to 3 tonight to reject Russian demands for an oil concession and to initiate a five-year oil exploration program from which all foreign capital will be barred.

The vote on the oil question was taken after Premier Qavam reported on his oil negotiations with the Russians and then presented his own five-point bill, which was approved.

It provided:

1. Iran will explore its own oil resources during the next five years and exploit them with its own capital.

2. Qavam's negotiations for an oil pact with Russia are null and void.

3. Iran will not be permitted to grant any concessions to foreign powers or to have foreign partners or assistance in oil exploration.

4. If oil is found by Iran in the next five years, the country may negotiate with Russia with a view to selling oil.

5. Iran must negotiate with the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. to obtain a higher share of its profits.

The vote specifically rejected a tentative oil pact Qavam signed with Russia last year which would have given the U. S. S. R. a 51 per cent share in a Soviet-Iran oil company. Qavam made his report after conferring with United States Ambassador George V. Allen.

Qavam reminded the Majlis that Russian troops were in Iran at the time the oil pact was signed and the northern Province of Azerbaijan was planning to secede.

200 Under Arrest After Break With Reds and Czechs

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Chilean police began a wholesale roundup of Communist leaders today following the diplomatic break with Russia and Czechoslovakia which the government explained was made necessary to protect the nation's control over its own labor affairs.

Police announced that 200 Communist leaders had been seized and that warrants had been issued for 300 more accused of instigating a "rebellion" among Chilean coal miners.

The newspaper Diario Ilustrado said four members of the party's central committee were among those arrested. It added that police were seeking all 45 members of the committee, which was charged officially with ordering the "rebellion" in the Schwager Coal Mine, where dynamite was used yesterday in an effort to thwart troops sent into the pit to remove sit-down strikers.

May End Immunities

An authoritative source indicated the government would ask Congress to lift the parliamentary immunity of any Communist Deputies or Senators who may have been implicated in the strike agitation, but disclaimed any intention of having the Communist Party outlawed.

Another source said the government had "background" on Czech diplomats in Chile "justifying" the break with Czechoslovakia, but would not disclose the nature of the information. He emphasized that the severance of relations with Czechoslovakia, as well as with Russia and Yugoslavia, cut the Soviets off from any direct contact with Chile, even through "satellites."

Police also arrested the Communist daily El Siglio's staff.

The government newspaper La Nacion declared that Soviet diplomats, who were handed their walking papers yesterday, would be permitted to leave Chile only after Moscow and Prague had authorized the departure of "all Chilean representatives and members of their families."

Exit Permit Refused

It was recalled that Soviet authorities have repeatedly refused to let the Russian daughter-in-law of Chilean Ambassador Cruz Ocampo leave the Soviet Union.

The government severed relations with the two countries yesterday after expelling two Yugoslav diplomats last week, an action that resulted in Yugoslavia's ordering all relations cut.

Vatican Newspaper Cites Brazil's Example

Vatican City, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said today Brazil's example in breaking relations with Soviet Russia "also could be followed by many other Latin-American republics."

In Rome the moderate newspaper Momento Sera said the action was "significant because it was made after the pact of Rio de Janeiro which pledged all the states of the American continent to uniformity of international conduct."

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—The Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry said tonight that Chile's action in breaking off relations with this country was going against "decency between nations" and "cannot be conducive to the consolidation of peace." A foreign office spokesman said the break "could only be because of our friendship with Russia."

Like Chile-Brazil Action

The United American Veterans yesterday congratulated Chile and Brazil for breaking relations with Soviet Russia. The UAV's national board of directors, at a special session here, directed the letter be sent to Ambassadors of both countries.

British Buying Of U. S. Tobacco May Be Halted

London, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin hinted tonight that Britain had decided to halt the purchase of American tobacco for an indefinite period. Subsequently a board of trade spokesman said an announcement on the subject might be made tomorrow.

Speaking in Wandsworth Bevin described himself as a heavy smoker and added:

"I am conscious I have got to behave myself because we have had to stop buying tobacco. That doesn't mean you have to stop smoking as we have a lot in stock and we will go on using it."

Steel Workers Strike Over Dismantling

Essen, Germany, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Sixty steel workers at Velbert struck today in protest against the dismantling of a factory under the British and American reparations program. It was the first stoppage reported in the British-occupied Ruhr since the announcement that 682 plants had been listed for dismantling in the British and American zones.

Holy Cross Sisters Honored For Long Service in India

"The American people are more internationally minded today. But the American spirit is still the same."

These were the comments yesterday of Sister Mary Canisius, CSC, who had just returned from eight years in a Catholic mission in the wilds of Bengal, India.

Sister Canisius and Sister Marie Estelle, both sisters of the Holy Cross, were honored here yesterday in ceremonies at Dunbarton College and Dunbarton Academy of the Holy Cross.

Dressed in the conventional white muslin worn in Bengal as a protection against the heat, they walked up the college and academy students from the college, academy, preparatory and preschool departments.

The Rev. Vincent McCauley, Holy Cross priest who also has served as a missionary in India, then celebrated benediction and preached a sermon in the chapel.

Sister Canisius, who entertained American soldiers during the past war at Nagari Mission in Dacca District, India, said that the war has "opened the eyes" of the American populace. "My GI friends," she said, "came to hunt tigers near the mission. The jungle was only two miles off, you know."

Sister Estelle, when her boat landed September 2 in Savannah, Ga., was returning to American soil for the first time in 20 years.

She is impressed chiefly with neon lights and 'talkies." Modern automobiles, she says, don't faze her—especially after being confronted with the American Army jeep at her mission 250 miles north of Calcutta, she adds.

Ramadier Names New Cabinet

cialist), and secretary of state for overseas France, Paul Bechard (Socialist).

It was understood that the new ministerial group had agreed to cooperate with Ramadier until he confronts the National Assembly, October 28. The Papular Republican movement's executive committee made the participation of Bidault and Schuman conditional after that time.

Should these two ministers be withdrawn next Tuesday, it was considered unlikely that the new Ramadier cabinet could survive. In that case, General De Gaulle would have moved one step nearer to power.

[The Associated Press quoted an informed source as saying Ramadier acted to eliminate all members of the cabinet with leanings toward De Gaulle.—Editor's note.]

The general was informed of the ministers' mass resignation but made no comment. But Diomede Catroux, spokesman of the De Gaullist Rally of the French People (RPF), explained the general is not a candidate under the present constitution.

"It is a matter of the conscience of Vincent Auriol, President of the Republic, of Mr. Ramadier, and of the National Assembly what they do with a government that no longer represents more than 30 per cent of the people," Mr. Catroux added.

The returns from Sunday's municipal elections in 38,000 corporate communities have shown that the RPF candidates polled about 40 per cent of the popular vote.

Government Supporters Switch

Much of the De Gaullist following has come from the three government parties. The Popular Republicans (MRP) deserted almost en masse to the RPF banner. Thus, the old Ramadier cabinet was no longer a true representation of the country's feelings.

General Strike Threatened

The Communist-led General Federation of Labor (CGT) threatens a general strike unless there is an increase in the official minimum wage from 7000 francs a month to 10,500 francs—an increase of well over 50 per cent.

Schuman, was reported to have told Ramadier that the present weakness of the franc could not withstand this inflationary rise of 50 per cent in wage increase.

There was confusion during the day. De Gaulle had been expected to make a statement but called it off until after next Sunday's run-off elections. This supplementary balloting is to elect administrations in towns with less than 9000 people.

Next, Ramadier called a press conference for 7 p. m. This was called off without explanation.

Senators Urge Revision of Potsdam Pact

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—Four Republican members of the Senate Appropriations Committee proposed today that the Potsdam agreement be rewritten, German plant dismantling halted and that the three western occupying powers sign a separate treaty with Germany if Russia continues her "noncooperation" policy.

Senators Styles Bridges, New Hampshire; C. Wayland Brooks, Illinois; Guy Gordon, Oregon, and Leverett Saltonstall, Massachusetts, said they believed dismantling of the 682 German war and industrial plants earmarked for reparations in the Anglo-American zones should be halted immediately.

"It's crazy to shovel out hundreds of millions on one hand and take out things which would permit the Germans to get on their feet," Bridges told a press conference.

He said he favored reparations to be taken from current production of German plants rather than from actual plant machinery. He stressed, however, that he expected Germany to pay reparations.

Bridges said machinery in Germany could be used to assist European reconstruction under the Marshall Plan.

He said that if Russia continued her noncooperation policy as far as the Potsdam agreement was concerned, he favored a separate western Germany composed of the American, British and French zones in order to save American taxpayers money.

The other three members of the committee said they agreed with Bridges, but that the statements were merely "a fleeting glimpse" of the ideas "which will help with decisions when we get back home."

Aid Europe Or Face War, Report Warns

New York, Oct. 22 (A.P.).—Lewis H. Brown, chairman of Johns-Manville Corp., said today the American people must choose one of three courses:

War "now or later" with Russia; isolationism, leaving the rest of the world to communism, or backing the Marshall Plan with as vigorous and integrated an organization for cooperation with our allies as we used to win World War II.

Brown published the text of his report to Secretary Marshall, the U. S. Army General Staff, and Gen. Lucius D. Clay, U. S. Army administrator in Germany, after a two-month trip to Europe at the request of General Clay to study western Germany's postwar industrial potential.

The manufacturer said that "isolationism is unacceptable to the American people" and that "war with Russia will cost infinitely more than will the firm backing of the Marshall Plan and our foreign policy."

He advocated the third course, saying:

"We must be determined to live and let live and we must be determined to back our policy with force if necessary. At the same time we must be very practical and realistic, making sure that our objective is not dissipated by people with social-service-worker minds who believe that merely spending money accomplishes the kind of objectives that are necessary in this kind of economic war."

In a pamphlet entitled "A Report on Germany," Brown detailed plans for "getting Germany eventually off the backs of the American taxpayers," and said "a new policy applicable to western Germany to prevent restoration of German militarism should be drawn up to take the place of the Yalta and Potsdam agreements."

Alaskan Protests Officer's Shooting Threat to Truman

New York, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—Mayor Arthur J. Harris of Unalaska, Alaska, has protested to President Truman and the War Department against the alleged threat of an unidentified Army major to shoot citizens who venture beyond a military fence line, he said in a telegram to the United Press.

Harris charged the major with transforming Unalaska into a concentration camp with the fence line which was established during the war.

The Harris added that the fence was built directly through the town and some of the land beyond it was owned by private citizens, including a native cemetery.

"The Army claims it is doing this because of stealing and the destruction of military property," Harris said.

He then explained that his people had taken nothing but items tossed on the dumps.

Yacht With Seven Aboard Feared Lost

Hamilton, Bermuda, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—The 78-foot yacht Beegee, which reportedly left Oyster Bay, N. Y., 10 days ago for Bermuda carrying seven passengers and crewmen, was long overdue tonight and feared lost in the hurricane which lashed the island earlier this week.

A radar-equipped U. S. Army B-17 and U .S. Navy search planes swept the sea today, vainly seeking traces of the missing boat. The yacht's owner, James Winfield of Chester Bay, Nova Scotia, and Bermuda, and six others were believed aboard.

Vishinsky Demands 'Warmonger' Curb

Russian Accuses Forrestal, Harriman, Byrnes of Propaganda, Asks Censorship

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Andrei Vishinsky of Russia today demanded that all of the United Nations impose censorship to curb "warmongers" whom he said are especially virulent in the United States.

He accused former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes and Defense Secretary James V. Forrestal and Commerce Secretary W. Averell Harriman of spreading propaganda for war with Russia.

Byrnes, he asserted, "is trying to break the record in producing slanderous fabrications against the Soviet Union.

"His new book, 'Speaking Frankly,'" said the Soviet Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs, contains "nonsense, provocative rubbish and slanderous inventions."

"It is a 'call for war.'"

As "warmongers," he also listed former Prime Minister Winston Churchill, former Ambassador to Moscow William Bullitt, the Field Artillery Journal and one of its writers, a Colonel Pickett, Successful Farming, Hearst Publications and Hearst Radio commentators, and Henry Usborne, a member of the British Parliament recently on tour in this country.

All these he lumped together as "Fulton (Missouri) heroes, American monopolies inspiring a 'new course' of the foreign policy of the United States, psychopathic ruffins, paranoiacs and schizophreniacs, obsessed by inane ideas or simply gangsters of the pen."

Their "mercenary pens are ready to daub in any colors anything these gangsters are told to and are paid for at a suitable price by their influential bosses, principals and impresarios," Vishinsky told the Political Committee of the United Nations Assembly.

Warren R. Austin, American Ambassador to the United Nations who is expected to answer tomorrow Vishinsky's accusations in support of a Russian proposal for punishment of "warmongers" in the United States, Greece and Turkey, immediately issued this statement:

"Mr. Vishinsky's speech is part of the propaganda campaign the Soviet press and radio have carried on for many months with growing intensity. This Soviet propaganda campaign is designed generally to discredit the Government and people of the United States and of other countries and to cast doubt upon the sincerity of their peaceful intentions.

"Its effect is to create confusion and will hinder the accomplishment of constructive tasks."

Herbert V. Evatt, Australian Minister of External Affairs, objected in a speech before the Assembly's Political Committee following Vishinsky's, to the "violent attack and abusive language."

"One of the factors which is doing so much to encourage the present world-wide fear of war and even to encourage war itself, is the persistent and unrestrained attack on the United States that is being waged by the Soviet press and radio," said Evatt.

"By these means the Russian people are being led to believe that the United States is contemplating and deliberately planning a war of aggression. Such imputation is recklessly false.

"To call Byrnes a warmonger is like calling Hitler an angel of peace."

Vishinsky outdid all his previous vituperation in opening the debate on his proposal.

"Assertions that the establishment of censorship is wrong are inadmissible, are wrong and hypocritical," he declared. They are "wrong because the introduction of rules that regulate social relations for the benefit of society and the people, for the common welfare, are a sacred right of the people."

It is "hypocritical because the legislative practice of various countries, including the United States, proves that such a regulation, no matter what its name would be, control or censorship, is very well known to various countries with the United States among them."

As proof that censorship already is practiced here, he declared the United States code made it a criminal offense to send through the mails anything containing "epithets, terms of language of an indecent, lewd, lascivious, obscene, libelous or threatening" matter.

Similar laws exist in France and Britain, he said.

For further proof that the United States press is not entirely free, and therefore eligible for further controls to curb "warmongers," he quoted from a 1919 decision of Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes: "The most strinent protection of free speech would not protect a man in falsely shouting 'fire' in a theater and causing panic."

He accused Forrestal of trying "to safeguard the corporation of businessmen from the reproaches that they, American monopolists, profit in war."

Harriman, war-time Ambassador to Russia, he said, "has also entered the list of warmongers and did not feel embarrassed to state in a frenzy that the Russians are trying to swallow up the world.

"Harriman incites the United States Government to counteract with its powerful air force," said Vishinsky, "the eastern 'aggressors,' which were invented by Harriman, and to strengthen still further the 'enterprise' of the American press which is already on top of the herculean pillars through its unbridled campaign of lying and slander against the Soviet Union and other countries of eastern Europe."

As for Churchill, he said the former British Prime Minister in a recent message to a New York memorial meeting honoring the late Al Smith, "once again shot a few poisoned arrows at the Soviet Union." He accused Churchill of "trying to instigate a new war."

Bullitt, once before named as a "warmonger" by Vishinsky for another article he wrote, "kicked the Soviet Union with his hoof" in a Life magazine article urging aid to China against Communist domination, he said.

The Field Artillery Journal was accused by Vishinsky of being an "organ of the Manufacturers Association furnishing their produce to the American armed forces."

"A certain Colonel Pickett, longing for war, excites in his story 'Something Happening at Spromtsk' the war appetites of the readers, outdoing himself to depict a new war against an enemy unnamed, but in fact specified because he mentions the war theater—the Artics," he declared.

The magazine Successful Farming was accused by Vishinsky of "warmongering" in a recent article entitled "Would Our Soil Win Another War?"

But Vishinsky saved his choicest words for Byrnes, whom he said was "inspired by Hollywood where he is now serving in some vague capacity as a legal adviser, or as an art adviser or a critic."

"He is said to be more successful in this field than in the managing of American foreign policy," said Vishinsky.

"Suffering from lust for fame, gone from his hands since he was participating in the foreign policy arena, Byrnes incites the United States Government to try to get from the Soviet Union with the help of the United Nations a consent to withdraw the occupation forces from the eastern zone of Germany, while threatening the Soviet Union with war. . . .

"This literary exercise of Byrnes has, undoubtedly its own reasons and it cannot be regarded, of course, as a kind of jump by the former United States Secretary of State into the unknown.

"This is a sign of the times, a tribute to the malicious slanderous and provocative attitude toward the Soviet Union which is now characteristic of certain American circles to which Byrnes belongs and under whose fiddle he suddenly began an open propaganda for war."

Communist Blasts U. S. Aid Plan

said, and "the existence of the Labor Government in Britain and the Socialist Government of Ramadier in France do not hinder Britain and France from following the lead of the imperialistic policy of the United States in most main issues.

"Such colonial states as Belgium and Holland support the imperialistic camp; also such countries with reactionary regimes as Greece and Turkey — dependent upon the United States politically as well as economically — and the countries of the Near East, South America and China."

He said the "western bloc" being constructed by the United States was not in accord with Winston Churchill's plans for a United States of Europe, but along the lines of an "American protectorate in which European countries were predestined to become the forty-ninth State." It was here that he made this flat statement:

"The U. S. S. R. will put all effort in seeing that the Marshall Plan is not realized."

Soviet "for Lasting Peace"

He said that the Soviet Union's foreign policy stands for "lasting peace and cannot be interested in a new war."

He said the liquidation of the Comintern (Communist International) had put an end forever to the claim by Communism's enemies that Moscow interfered with the internal life of other states.

"During the four years since the Comintern was liquidated, considerable strengthening of Communist Parties has taken place, as well as an increase in their influence in almost all countries of Europe and Asia," he asserted.

However, he said, today there still were deficiencies, adding that "some comrades have interpreted the dissolution of the Comintern to mean the liquidation of communication, or any contact between fraternal Communist Parties."

"Experience shows such separateness between Communist Parties is wrong, harmful and unnatural. The Communist movement is developing in national frames, but at the same time it has a common job and interest for parties of various countries."

Byrnes Urges German Parley

America and France, in control of the Ruhr industries in Germany. Byrnes argued the United States could not afford to agree with either Soviet demand.

Byrnes declared Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov would not agree to real progress on a German peace settlement at any point unless the American, British and French foreign ministers "agree to what Mr. Molotov wants."

However, he said that Molotov might agree at the London meeting next month to let actual work be started on drafting a treaty—preliminary work which, he said, the Russian has "delayed for more than a year."

"Those who are uninformed will regard it as progress," Byrnes said. "Mr. Molotov will not. He knows he can delay the preliminary draft for at least six month."

He added that even after that Russia would insist on a veto for even minor points which the Reds do not like.

After predicting there could be no four-power agreement on a peace conference unless Molotov has his own way, Byrnes continued:

"The United States, Britain and France will then have to decide whether the chaotic conditions of Europe will indefinitely continue or whether they will proceed to do what I suggest they now do—call a peace conference regardless of the Soviet attitude.

"I know they will call a conference. If they are going to do it a year hence—why not do it now."

He did not say specifically whether his word "now" meant before or immediately after the impending London conference.

Note From Stalin Offended Roosevelt, Byrnes Reveals

agreed to secure easier peace terms for Germany. In accordance with this agreement, Stalin charged, the Germans already had moved three divisions from the Italian front to the Russian front, and the American Army had been permitted to advance in Germany.

Dignified Denial

Despite his personal reaction to this message, President Roosevelt managed to write a dignified reply. The movement of the three German divisions from the Italian to the Russian fronts, the President pointed out, had begun several weeks before the information regarding the desire of the Germans to negotiate had even reached Field Marshal Alexander and therefore the negotiations could not have been responsible in any way for the troop transfer. Stalin would have to believe him to be honest and truthful, the President declared. General Eisenhower would not have entered into any negotiations without informing him. No negotiations such as Stalin described had taken place, and from the receipt of the first message from the Germans, instructions had been issued to keep the Soviet authorities fully informed.

In the last paragraph of his message, the President gave vent to some of his feelings.

He deeply resented, he said, the "vile misrepresentations" of Stalin's informers which reflected upon the President of the United States and his trusted subordinates, and indicated a belief that Stalin's informants wished to destroy the friendly relations between the two countries. He thought it would be a tragedy if, just as victory for the Allies seemed assured, such misrepresenations should disturb the unity that had existed and that was necessary for complete victory.

ever, knew that the information was wrong and that the German drive was to take place at another point. The Red army had concentrated its forces at the place it thought best and had stopped the German drive. He recognized, he said, that the Germans may have misled the Americans and British officers deliberately, but the incident served to show the accuracy of his Red army officers. He wished, nevertheless, to thank the Americans for this effort to be helpful. On the whole, Stalin's message was more conciliatory than the previous ones, and President Roosevelt, on April 11, sent Stalin a message saying he was glad the unfortunate incident was now over.

Talks Postponed

Meanwhile, the negotiations with the Germans had been postponed for other reasons, and in the interim the Combined Chiefs of Staff made a proposal that was accepted by the Soviet military leaders. It provided that each of the three powers should observe all surrender negotiations, but that a surrender on any one front would not be delayed because of the absence of any one of the powers.

Nevertheless, Stalin's charges and his apparent willingness to believe we had secretly concluded a separate peace, coupled with the exceedingly objectionable language of at least one of his messages had greatly offended Mr. Roosevelt. And when President Truman assumed office and read these messages he fully sympathized with the view and attitude of President Roosevelt.

Stalin Told Peace Negotiations Finished

"Stalin said the information given him by his Red army advisers showed that negotiations (for peace) had been completed, and that, as a result of them Kesselring was going to open up the German front to permit American Army to advance."

TO this message Stalin replied that he did not question the President's honesty or truthfulness but repeated his belief that he had received accurate information from Red army advisers. He had reason to regard them as accurate, he said, because only a short time earlier General Marshall and the general of the British army had been kind enough to send word to the Russian commanding general that the Germans were concentrating at a certain point in preparation for attack upon the Russian lines. The Russian officers, however, knew that the information was wrong and that the German drive was to take place at another point. The Red army had concentrated its forces at the place it thought best and had stopped the German drive. He recognized, he said, that the Germans may have misled the Americans and British officers deliberately, but the incident served to show the accuracy of his Red army officers. He wished, nevertheless, to thank the Americans for this effort to be helpful. On the whole, Stalin's message was more conciliatory than the previous ones, and President Roosevelt, on April 11, sent Stalin a message saying he was glad the unfortunate incident was now over.

ON THE same day that President Roosevelt received his last message from Stalin, he received one from Prime Minister Churchill. It stated that he had to make a statement in the House of Commons within a few days, dealing primarily with Poland, but necessarily requiring a discussion of Russian relations. He was exceedingly anxious not to say anything that would affect adversely the military situation at that critical hour and he asked President Roosevelt for advice.

Although the President by that time was greatly disappointed by the Soviet attitude, he was philosophical about it. He had reached the conclusion—which I was to reach months later—that there is no easy formula to guide one in getting along with the Soviets. Thus, on April 12, an hour before he died, President Roosevelt, replying to the Prime Minister's request for advice about his speech to Commons, sent this message:

I would minimize the general Soviet problem as much as possible because these problems, in one form or another, seem to arise every day and most of them straighten out as in the case of the Bern meeting.

We must be firm, however, and our course thus far is correct.

The message was sent from Warm Springs and bears all the earmarks of having been written by the President himself. The advice is as good today as it was on the day it was written.

Legend Dispelled

It is idle to speculate on what the course of history would have been had President Roosevelt lived, but these messages dispose of the legend that our relations with the Soviet Union began to deteriorate only after his death.

The President's deliberate efforts to cultivate the good will of Marshall Stalin have led some observers to underestimate the strength of his affection and admiration for Mr. Churchill. It was a feeling that was genuine and that was cordially reciprocated. It was the kind of friendship that permitted frankness in their conversations with each other and about each other.

WHENEVER Mr. Churchill was a guest at the White House, the President would complain to those of us who had to carry on business with him that Mr. Churchill had kept him up late. But even as he complained about his guest, it was clear that the President had greatly enjoyed the conversation of the previous evening. Once at Yalta, when we were preparing for dinner at the end of a long session, the President gumbled that the lengthy session was "Winston's fault because he had made too many speeches."

"Yes, he did," I replied, "but they were good speeches."

The President chuckled and replied:

"Winston doesn't make any other kind."

It is true, if my observations at Yalta provide a typical example, that the President used all his charm and his genius for promoting human relationships to make the Big Three meetings harmonious. The value of these qualities in those early days cannot be overestimated. But the Soviet leaders did overestimate the ultimate extent of the President's generosity and his willingness to compromise on principles.

On July 3, 1945, Mr. Byrnes was sworn in as Secretary of State on the rose-covered east portico of the White House. Three nights later, he traveled with President Truman to Newport News, where the Augusta was waiting to take them to Europe, to Potsdam, and the first step down the long road to peace. They landed at Antwerp on July 15. The next installment of "Speaking Frankly," to be published tomorrow, describes the beginnings of the Potsdam Conference.

Man Celebrates 85th Birthday By Flying Plane

Los Angeles, Oct. 22 (AP):—James Wilson Montee went for an airplane ride on his 85th birthday today—and he flew the plane himself.

Montee, who claims to be America's oldest licensed pilot, cruised around in a four-place private plane for 30 minutes with three other generations of his family as passengers, then brought it in for a perfect landing.

With him were his daughter, Mrs. Pauline Copass, 36, his 5-year-old granddaughter, Dianne Copass, and his 2-year-old great grandson, Kenneth Allen Hyler. All agreed that it was a fine flight.

Montee obtained his pilot's license when he was 60 and celebrated his 80th birthday by piloting a twin-engine airliner. He has flown 32 different types of aircraft.

Marshall Calls Plan Just Draft

suggestion. Now we are in the process of drafting a plan as a proposal to the Congress of the United States.

"The period of study and preparation is thus drawing to a close. The time of action is at hand."

"For many months," Marshall said, "both the Government and the people of the United States have been considering the growing dangers of the economic situation in Europe, and our relation to the problem.

Real and Urgent Need

"That Europe's need of assistance is real and urgent I believe is no longer a matter of argument. And it is likewise evident that the United States of America, in the present state of the world, represents the primary source from which this need can be met.

"I am sure that you all understand the vital importance to us of the preservation of European civilization. We cannot stand indifferent to the rate of the nations who are having great difficulty in recovering from the consequences of the war, and are looking to us for assistance.

"These are people who hold the same views of international conduct as we do. If we are to be successful in our quest for peace in a decent world, we will be constantly in need of their strong cooperation."

"Our Government has realized from the first th emagnitude of this problem, and the numerous pitfalls that lie in the way of its solution. Despite the urgency of the situation, sufficient time had to be allowed for the collection of all pertinent facts and opinions and a thorough study of all the elements, both foreign and domestic, which enter into the problem.

Preliminary Report

"We have the preliminary report of the 16 nations who met in Paris this summer. We are beginning to receive reports from the various governmental groups who have been examining into ur own resources and their relationship to possible demands of the European situation.

"Commissions of Congress who have traveled extensively throughout Europe are returning to this country, and the results of their investigations are becoming available.

"I think it is important that you should understand something of the procedure which is now being followed by your Government in arriving at a conclusion and preparing a program for presentation to the committees of Congress, and later to the Congress itself.

"At the present time, in fact every day of the week, including Saturdays and Sundays, a large portion of the personnel of the Sttae Department and representative groups of other interested departments and agencies, such as the Treasury Department, the Departments of Commerce and Interior, the Departments of Agriculture and Labor, for example, are engaged in daily sessions working together on data which I have described, to determine exactly what should be the program of the Government.

A Government Program

"When it is completed it will truly be a program of the United States Government and not of any one department or agency. Your contribution should be of great value in bringing the people, the public opinion of the country, to the support of this great effort."

The President's letter said "it is essential that in our judgments we cling to those things which are fundamental and do not permit ourselves to be diverted by things which are inconsequential or not to the point.

"What are our fundamental aims with respect to the peoples of Europe? It is important that we identify these aims and hold them steadily before ourselves, and before world opinion.

"Our deepest aspiration is for a peaceful and stable world, a world in which all nations can enjoy freedom and security and can make their maximum contributions to the progress of civilization.

"In the annuals of this progress there are no more glorious pages than those written by the peoples of Europe. A great portion of our contemporary civilization takes its origin from their genius and their effort.

"At present many of them have been brought low, in varying degrees, by the effects of a devastating war. In this condition, they are unable to play their traditional part in world affairs. They are looking to us to assist them to overcome the weaknesses and difficulties with which they are afflicted.

Revolt Flares Near Border In Mongolia

Nanking, October 22 (AP).—Government victories in the great Fushun coal mining area were tempered today with official announcement that a long smouldering revolt had broken out in isolated Sinkiang Province on the Russian border.

Official sources told the Associated Press they suspected that because of its strength Mongol tribesmen and possibly Russians were assisting the Ili tribesmen's attack. They reported the rebels overwhelmed Chenghwa, near the border, with a force supplied with 80 truckloads of munitions.

Chenghwa, a government outpost, is 250 miles north of the Sinkiang provincial capital, Tihwa, and 35 miles from the Outer Mongolian border.

Progovernment dispatches received at Peiping reported national forces inflicted 10,000 casualties in smashing the Communists' 30,000-man attack in the Fushun area and another 10,000 on Reds at Pamiencheng.

most of these after "some painful episodes."

Said Eberstadt: "An earlier and more careful adherence to these proven policies and practices might well have resulted in saving time, money and lives."

Slated fireworks between Chairman Owen Brewster (R., Me.) and Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) over "motives" behind the hearings failed to come off.

There were occasional mild flareups, but for the most part Brewster and Pepper were coldly polite. Pepper had charged the hearings were called to smear Roosevelt. Brewster, at the outset, disclaimed any political motives. He said errors in wartime are not the property of any party. Pepper said he was not opposed to a thorough study of World War II mobilization by the proper standing committee, but felt the Brewster committee, expiring in January, lacked jurisdiction.

Brewster wanted to know why prewar mobilization plans were not put into effect, and if war results would have been "improved" if they had been.

Forrestal indicated his belief that public opinion was the barrier to full mobilization at the war's start. He criticized the Army-Navy Munitions Board's revised 1939 plan as too general, and said it failed to recognize "the extent to which the country's entire economy must contribute to modern war." Whether it would have served better than the steps actually taken is "a matter of conjecture," he said.

Brewster put the same question to Hargrave. The latter said by late 1942 and early 1943 we were doing most of the things recommended in the 1939 plan.

Question Raised

"Then that meant a loss of 18 months in arriving at what was proved to be necessary?" said Brewster.

Hargrave seemingly agreed, then gave an emphatic "Oh, no" when Pepper questioned him. He said he meant to say "the plans used were successful."

The new Munitions Board chief ed plan for harnessing our tre-stressed that a "completely accept-mendous economic potential" must be ready, and preferably on the statute when an emergency was hard on us might accelerate a crisis, but would "hardly create a ripple" if enacted next year. He said such a basic law could be amended from time to time, the country would become familiar with it, and ready to accept it if war came.

During the luncheon recess preceding Hargrave's testimony Forrestal told newsmen that drafts of legislation and directives necessary for industrial mobilization in event of an emergency were already under consideration. He said his thought was to have the bills drafted and ready for enactment when needed.

Later Eberstadt testified he thought mobilization bills should be ready, but not necessarily enacted in advance. Brewster said he thought they should be actually on the statute books because "as the shadow of a war approaches, legislation becomes more and more difficult."

Pepper disagreed. He said it was well to have people constantly "working on plans . . . but there isn't any way you can get Congress to pass a whole series of plans when there is no war emergency."

First on the witness stand, Forrestal told the committee that during World War II "we never arrived at adequate machinery for dealing with the manpower problem" and by the end of the war "we were practically scraping the bottom of the manpower barrel."

The National Defense secretary testified:

That any mobilization plan drawn must deal with the "entire economy" and not merely with military production and training.

That a man strong enough to resist popular pressures should be picked in advance for a position equivalent to that of Director of War Mobilization, in over-all charge on the civilian front.

Lovett Sees Early Action On Jap Peace

Acting Secretary of State Lovett said yesterday there was a chance of starting negotiations for a Japanese peace treaty by the end of this year.

He indicated that the exact date would depend on how quickly the United States could iron out differences with Russia and China over the membership and procedure of a preliminary peace conference. Discussions with Russia and China, he said, are now going on through diplomatic channels.

The differences spring from the American proposal of last July that the 11 leading Pacific powers meet soon to start work on the Japanese treaty. Eight of the 10 governments questioned on the subject approved the proposal, and also approved the American idea that conference decisions be taken by a two-thirds vote.

The Soviet Government insisted, however, that the treaty negotiations be confined to the Foreign Ministers of the United States, United Kingdom, China and Russia.

It remains probable, although Lovett did not say so, that the conference will be held without Russia if all the others can agree on procedure.

The Acting Secretary announced that Maxwell Hamilton, American Minister to Finland and former head of the State Department's Office of Far Eastern affairs, had been appointed Secretary Marshall's deputy in the work on the Japanese treaty.

Hamilton is now in Washington planning the American policy to be followed in the treaty negotiations.

In his news conference yesterday Lovett also indicated that Secretary Marshall himself is considering American policy toward China, in the light of the suppressed report of Lieut. Gen. Albert S. Wedemeyer.

His replies to questions hinted that a new policy was in the making, for he did not reaffirm the existing policy set by Secretary Marshall last January.

Lovett simply said he could not state American policy toward China, since it was being considered at levels higher than his own. He said he could not comment until Secretary Marshall himself approved the recommendations sent to him by his subordinates in the department.

Farm Program Popular in Deep South

Florence, Ala., Oct. 22 (AP).—The grass root congressional search for long-range agricultural policy headed out of the deep South today after hearing Dixie farmers in virtually one voice say that the past farm program, polished up a little, is good enough for the future.

Chairman Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) of the House Agriculture Committee told reporters that Southern farmers seem unanimous in approval of the current agricultural aids, including price support, acreage controls when needed, and, above all, soil conservation.

"If there were any dissenting witnesses," Hope said, "they certainly did not come to us, nor could we find them. I do not know whether this feeling is unanimous but it certainly is supported by a large majority."

Group Touring Nation

The committee also heard pleas for protection of farm cooperatives and expansion of rural electrification.

Hope told a group of Tennessee Valley farmers here last night that "any sound farm program of this country must have as its base the conservation of the soil."

The Agriculture Committee is touring the Nation, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, to get directly from the farmer his views on the future relation of the Government to a stable agriculture.

The committee already has held hearings in the New England States, along the Eastern seaboard and in the deep South, with more than 200 farmers from 22 States voicing their opinions. The next hearing will be at Madison, Wis., Friday.

Soil Conservation Popular

Tobacco and peanut farmers of Virginia and the Carolinas emphasized to the committee their desires for continuation of production control. Cotton farmers put their emphasis on price support and soil conservation.

Both in the hearing rooms and in the farmyards, farmers have expressed concern over the December 31, 1948, expiration date for the price support program. Most of them have asked that the price floor under agricultural commodities be made permanent.

U. S. to Get Less Pork Next Year

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

There will be millions of pounds less pork for Americans next year, as another step in this country's program to feed hungry nations abroad.

The Department of Agriculture yesterday fixed a spring pig goal of 50 million—eight million little pigs fewer than the goal fixed for last year, and three million less than were actually raised.

As a step toward further reducing grain consumption, the department again urged that farmers send their hogs to market before they get fat—in other words market them at light weights, from 200 to 220 pounds.

The program for fewer pigs next spring was based entirely on the Administration's desire to cut down on feeding urgently needed grain to livestock, a direct reversal of last year's goal of increasing pork production.

If farmers heed the request it will result in a spring pig crop about 4 per cent below the average since 1936. Usually production falls below the goals set by the Government.

The announcement came as the rampaging wheat market again set new high records. Reports of a dust storm in Kansas, emphasizing the dry weather that has delayed wheat planting, and warning of greatly lowered wheat production next year, plus increased Government buying for export, sent quotations spiraling upward.

December wheat closed at $3.11¾, a new high for that future. Corn and soybeans were slightly lower, but oats were higher than the Tuesday close.

Meantime the Citizens Food Committee marked time on the demand of poultrymen and poultry feed manufacturers that the ban on poultry eating on Thursdays be lifted.

Chairman Charles Luckman of the food committee, held a telephone conference with his executive committee in the afternoon. It was later announced that he would hold further meetings with the Cabinet Food Committee, made up of the Secretaries of State, Commerce and Agriculture, before announcing action.

Bad news for housewives was contained in two announcements. One from Procter & Gamble at Cincinnati announced an increase of 6 per cent in the wholesale price of soaps and soap products, and a 3 per cent rise in vegetable shortenings. The higher cost of raw materials, tallow, coconut oil and cottonseed oil was blamed.

General Foods, Inc., increased the wholesale price of Maxwell House coffee 1 cent a pound, following a similar raise by Del Monte and Folger coffees earlier in the week.

From Canada came word that the Government had taken another step toward decontrol there, lifting price ceilings on meats, oats and barley.

Chairman Luckman of the food committee, took the food conservation program to the country by radio yesterday. In a Nation-wide hook-up, he urged the country's mayors to join in the campaign.

Luckman particularly emphasized the amount of grain fed to poultry and pointed out that reducing use of poultry and meats would result in a saving of a large part of the 100 million bushels of wheat President Truman set as the goal for his committee.

Part of the program, he said, already had been accomplished by the cooperation of industry and agriculture, but, he added, "much must come from voluntary food savings by individuals.

"This saving must be made in the next 90 days," he declared.

Arabs Want U. S. Know-How, Not Food, School Head Says

Arabs want American brains and skills—not dollars and food—to knit the Arab League into solidarity.

Dodge

This aid and friendship, eagerly sought, will insulate the Near East against Communist and nurture a growing pro-American attitude, Dr. Bayard Dodge, president of the American University of Beirut, told a news conference yesterday.

Dr. Dodge, faculty member of the University since 1913 and its president since 1923, returned to the States in mid-September for a winter's vacation. He will address an open meeting of the Washington Council, East-West Association at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Commerce Department Auditorium.

The veteran educator saw the United States' attitude toward the Arabs as the one spot vulnerable to communism.

He interpreted American pressure for partition of Palestine as "hitting the Arab between the eyes" and warned that such action "will cost the United States all the favor" it has built up in the Middle East.

"Arabs and Jews have lived together peacefully in Iraq and Palestine for centuries," he said. "The Arab is protesting two points—mass immigration to Palestine and creation of an independent Jewish State there."

American educational methods and governmental training to produce honest leaders among them is a prime Arab desire, Dr. Dodge explained. They also seek technical skills in farming, engineering and public health.

Realistically, he pointed to the Arabs' vast petroleum deposits and the billions of American dollars being spent for them.

Withdrawal of Britain from the Palestinian mandate "will be another Punjab," he predicted, "but despite this unrest, it likely will require 25 years for the Russians to make capital of the situation."

Food-Saving Plan for D. C. To Be Mapped

Plans for a community campaign to rally support behind the national food-saving drive will be made today at the first meeting of the District Citizens Food Conservation Committee in the District Building at 3:30 p. m.

Yesterday Chairman James E. Colliflower named an eighth vice chairman—Sidney Kolker, general chairman of the wholesale food division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Kolker, who is an official of the Washington Beef & Provision Co., named a committee of wholesalers to assist the local group when called upon. Members are:

Hotel supply—Morris Kraft, District Hotel Supply Co.; poultry—Max T. Bressler of Morris Bressler & Co. and Brian Cunningham of C. A. Swanson & Son, Inc.

Meat products, R. C. Briggs of L. S. Briggs & Co.; meat wholesaler, John P. Lewis of the Pointer Co., Inc.; meat broker, John Klein; butter, eggs and cheese, Nick Coppola of Grand Valley Products, Inc., and William F. Huhn of William F. Huhn Co.

In Baltimore, Mrs. Annie Stein of 3520 Quebec st. nw., a member of the cost of living committee of the Washington Industrial Union Council, CIO, and the Washington Women's Auxiliary of the United Public Workers of America, CIO, called for a "real price control and rationing program."

Mrs. Stein told a joint congressional committee that "rising prices have hit Washingtonians particularly hard" since their wages rose only 49 per cent from 1940 to 1947, while average wages rose 110 per cent nationally.

Leaders Meet Today on Aid

ident might have something to say on the subject tomorrow afternoon.

Lovett said it was unlikely that any part of the long-term European recovery program, recently worked out by the 16-nation conference at Paris, would have to be referred back to the European group for clarification. He said discussions here with leaders of the Paris conference had been extremely clarifying.

It was learned yesterday that the Administration experts no longer see the need of rewriting the Paris program for submission to Congress. The present intention is to submit the 16-nation proposals with "comments" from the Administration.

Lovett explained that almost any cutting down of the European "Marshall Plan" program in one direction dislocates it in others. For example, he said, suppose the United States is asked for 100 tons of pig-iron, and has only 50 tons available. If the required pig-iron cannot be shipped, then estimates of European steel production over the next four years must be reduced.

This means that Europe will be able to ship less steel as exports, said Lovett, and consenquently will be able to earn fewer dollars in the next four years. In other words, said the Acting Secretary, you meet yourself coming home.

Russians Boycott Year-Around U. N.

Lake Success, Oct. 22 (AP).—Russia and Czechoslovakia began their boycott today on Secretary of State Marshall's proposal for a year-round sitting of the United Nations Assembly.

Seats arranged for delegates of those two countries were left vacant as a subcommittee met to take up Marshall's proposal, and changes suggested by other nations.

3 Resolutions Pass

Three resolutions designed to promote greater use of the International Court of Justice were approved today by the 57-nation legal committee of the Assembly.

Over opposition of the Soviet bloc, the group approved 39 to 7 a recommendation that United Nations organs and specialized agencies review from time to time and refer to the court important points of law, including interpretations of the charter.

Russia lost an effort today to include the five big powers on a United Nations subcommittee to draft a blueprint for partition of Palestine into separate Jewish and Arab countries.

The United States had charged Russia presented a "false formula."

Fiasco Forecast

Dr. Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, chairman of the 57-nation Palestine committee, expressed a belief the Soviet proposal, if approved, would "create a fiasco" because Britain did not want to serve. It was defeated 31 to 6, with 10 abstentions.

The committee then voted 40 to 6, with four abstentions, to give Evatt authority to name members of the subcommittee.

Anacostia School Bid $6000 Below District Estimate

A low bid of $117,624 opened yesterday for building a third-floor addition to Anacostia High School, 16th and R sts. se., was more than $6000 lower than latest District estimates.

Municipal Architect Merril A. Coe said the Commissioners will probably be asked to award a contract in the next few days.

The project will take about six months to complete.

Lowest of five bids submitted was offered by Harwood-Nebel Construction Co., of 1520 K st. nw., Chief Engineer Clerk P. M. Lumpkins announced.

Mountbatten Hurt in Crash

London, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, scheduled to wed Princess Elizabeth November 20, was injured in an automobile accident while returning to the naval camp at Corsham from London last night, Buckingham Palace announced tonight.

The announcement said Philip suffered bruises and a twisted knee. Mountbatten was driving alone when his two-seated sports model car skidded at a turn south of Cirencester and ran into a hedge.

The car was badly damaged but Philip reported for duty today despite his bruises, the announcement said.

Red MP Criticises Note of Congratulations

London, Oct. 22 (AP).—Willie Gallagher, one of the two Communists in the British parliament, disassociated himself from a resolution congratulating Princess Elizabeth on her impending marriage today in a speech which Laborite McGovern called "most disgraceful."

Prime Minister Attlee and Conservative Leader Winston Churchill dropped political differences and joined in offering the motion, quickly adopted, expressing "our sincere cordial congratulations."

But Gallagher, amid cries of "sit down," said he did not want any part of the "lavish expenditure in connection with this affair."

Continental Air Route Dedication Set for Next Year

Skyway Number One, transcontinental air route marked to aid private fliers and linking Washington with Los Angeles, Calif., will be dedicated April 24, next year.

The announcement came yesterday from John A. Reilly, president of the Washington Board of Trade, which, with the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, sponsored the route.

The Skyway is a 40-mile-wide strip in which towns and prominent landmarks are air-marked to aid private fliers in navigation.

Reilly said that by spring "many of the 5000 towns and cities along the route will have completed air markings. The Skyway will offer northern and southern routes, converging at Abilene, Texas."

England Seeks Frozen Share Of U. S. Loan

London, Oct. 22 (AP).—The British Press Association said today the government has told the United States it wants to begin drawing "as soon as possible" on the frozen 400-million-dollar balance of her American loan, one of impoverished Britain's last sources of dollars.

A spokesman for the treasury declined to confirm or deny the report.

An unofficial informant said it was probable that Britain has made "some new approach" to the United States regarding the balance.

Sir Wilfrid Eady, treasury expert who usually negotiates with the United States on finance matters, is expected to go to Washington next month for financial talks.

Britain ceased withdrawals from the loan last August after announcing that she could no longer honor the convertibility clause of the loan agreement. Under this clause, Britain was compelled to give dollars to other nations on demand, in exchange for pounds sterling earned in current trading.

Crisis Brings Denouncement

London, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—Conservative Leader Winston Churchill's opposition bloc tonight introduced a resolution in Commons denouncing the Labor government's parliamentary program for failing to guarantee "national leadership" to meet Britain's severe economic crisis.

Virtually a motion of no confidence, the resolution said that Churchill would open two days' debate in Commons next week.

Historic Shrines

Fort Sumter is a name that rolls off the tongue of nearly every American. It is a symbol of our tragic disunity that led to greater unity and more secure constitutional guarantees of freedom. Yet this old Civil War fort in the Charleston Harbor was declared surplus by the War Department a few months ago and was in danger of being lost forever as a historic shrine. A bill hastily passed at the last session of Congress held this prospective junking of a historic landmark in abeyance. But the problem of saving and preserving the old fort is still to be worked out. Indeed, it is not yet out of jeopardy.

Threatened losses of this sort give special point to the organization here this week of the National Council for Historic Sites and Buildings. The council is a private agency that will coordinate the activities of local and regional groups, with Federal aid and encouragement but not control. Its purpose is to bring together individuals and associations interested in this preservation work for the exchange of ideas and a general strengthening of the movement to save our historic landmarks. One of the first steps to be taken by the council will be the organization of a National Trust to receive gifts, endowments and bequests for the acquisition and preservation of historic shrines. This agency, patterned after the National Trust that has done such excellent preservation work in England, will need to act quickly in many instances, for a large number of historic sites and buildings representative of irreplacable beauties of past centuries are said to be in danger from postwar developments.

It is true that worship of the past and the treasuring of everything that is old can be carried to ridiculous extremes. Intelligence and an intimate understanding of the past are essential to distinguish between mere age and historic significance—between what may be regarded as our artistic heritage and an accumulation of debris. We suspect that the ability to make such distinctions as well as the power to influence public opinion in favor of saving the shrines that are intimately associated with our civilization will be enhanced by the National Council that has now come into being.

Freedom To Fire

Congressman Wood of the House Committee on Un-American Activities advanced a novel idea in the course of yesterday's episode in the great Hollywood serial now being unreeled on Capitol Hill. Referring to a Washington Post editorial which hailed a judicial decision to the effect that calling a person a Communist falsely afforded ground for a libel action, Mr. Wood expressed concern lest this inhibit movie magnates in firing employes they suspected of Communist sympathies. Would it not, therefore, be helpful, he asked a film company executive testifying before the committee, if Congress enacted legislation which would authorize employers to dismiss employes who (in the opinion of the employers) entertained views or engaged in activities detrimental to the United States and which presumably would also relieve the employers from libel actions as a result.

Movie managements, like managements in every other field, have always had authority, of course, to fire employes for any reasons at all save those few, such as labor union membership, specifically prohibited by law. It would be a wonderful anomaly if Congress thought it now necessary to provide by legislation for exercise of the most elementary of managerial functions—the selection of personnel. No film studio is obliged to pay any script writer a $75,000-a-year salary unless it wants to.

But Mr. Wood had in mind something more. He wants to enable the movie managers not only to fire men but to fire them on mere suspicion and to blacklist them to boot with absolute impunity. He wants to deprive the victims of this suspicion and blacklisting of the legal remedy theoretically available to all aggrieved persons. The courts have held only that false use of the term Communist affords ground for libel action. The effect of Mr. Wood's proposal would be to deny redress not only to actual Communists but to persons falsely accused of being Communists. Here is a paradox to end all paradoxes. It is proposed that in the name of democracy, a system which exalts the individual, and to combat communism, a system which disregards individual dignity, we should deny individuals a chance to earn a living because of their political opinions and deny them even protection of those individual rights which are the distinctive glory of our society.

The President And Congress

Since the President's meeting with the congressional leaders three weeks ago, little has been done to solve the problem of stop-gap aid for Europe. France and Italy are the countries in most urgent need of help in coping with a certain food and fuel crisis this winter. The Administration has been indulging in a frantic quest to scrape enough loose funds together to keep France and Italy going till December 1. Then there is the Marshall gap problem—a decision on the Marshall Plan will probably not come till June. The President puts at 580 million dollars the amount needed as a carryover for western Europe while the Marshall Plan is being debated; that is to say, from December 1 till June. This is an issue for Congress.

Immediate aid, interim Marshall gap aid, Marshall Plan—the problem is threefold. The first still hasn't been solved. For the Italians, who have completely run out of dollars, a postwar UNRRA credit may carry them through till December 1. For the French, who are not beneficiaries of this credit, three sources have been tapped: part of the gold seized from the Nazis, a diversion of unusable funds by the Export-Import Bank, Army purchases in France. All told, this store of dollars does not make up for normal purchases of the fuel and food required. France will therefore be in the same straits as Italy by December 1, perhaps before. On top of this deficiency the President must get his 580-million-dollar estimate of Marshall gap aid. He is asking the congressional leaders again today to consider with him ways and means of finding a solution.

What can be done about it? Senator Taft a week or so ago said that some "ingenious person" ought to be able to find emergency credits for Europe without the necessity of a special session. He mentioned three sources: Export-Import Bank, Commodity Credit Corporation and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. His statement must have heartened the President. Mr. Truman has hesitated to take what he thought might be liberties with these funds without congressional assent. In our opinion he has been unduly solicitous. In the case of the CCC, in particular, he has authority, as we read the act, to supply grain on credit terms. To be sure, there is no precedent for allowing buyers, as well as farmers, credit out of this fund, but the law itself provides no prohibition. Moreover, he could call together the chairmen of the controlling committees of Congress and ask for deficiency appropriations, pending submission of an aid program to Congress. The time is overdue for such action. It takes six weeks or so to put through a relief operation after authorization by Congress, yet December 1 is just over five weeks away.

We cannot agree with Senator Taft that "ingenious" methods of this or any other variety would dispense with an extra session. Anyway, the American people, we feel sure, cannot understand why most of their representatives are away from Washington at a time that both the President and returning Congressmen describe as a time of crisis. Nor is the spectacle of empty halls of Congress helpful in restoring European morale. But an extra session is required, as we have said before, for specific purposes. We have already enumerated them, and will again put the main items on record:

1. To ask Congress for the 580 million dollars that he has said will be necessary to cover aid between December 1 and Marshall Plan aid. At the same time he could notify Congress of any deficiency appropriations he gets from the committees so that food and fuel consignments will not come to an end.
2. To ask for return of allocation powers so that the President could issue set-aside orders to the elevators. The powers would include rationing and price-control powers for use in an extremity.
3. To ask for a curb on installment-selling credit till the present inflation has been controlled. Relaxation of curbs will be abandoned on November 1 as a result of congressional action last session.
4. To ask for the lifting of the punitive tax on margarine, in behalf of the anti-inflation campaign.

We have included measures for combating inflation as well as helping Europe because the two issues are inseparably related. The only hope of the world is an American economy which remains strong and balanced, and, if the present rise in prices goes on, all the figures and premises of the Marshall Plan will be undermined. To arrest inflation, steps are available to the Administration along with the steps we recommend he asks of Congress. They have not yet been taken. We are thinking of a purge of overspeculation and the exercise of existing controls of foreign trade which would, for example, stop misdirected exports. The Administration must show Congress an example as well as leadership.

Communist Idiocy

Well, if it is of any comfort—and especially if it will keep you from losing any sleep about Communist infiltrations into Hollywood or about concealed Communist propaganda in the monthly magazines—we offer you proof of something that we have long suspected; namely, that the proportion of prime jackasses among the Communist hierarchy is even larger than among politicians in general. The proof is in the result of the recent municipal elections in France.

It is plain from the election returns that virtually the whole of the French Center has been driven into the arms of General de Gaulle and his Rally of the French People. It is also plain that they have been driven there by the knowledge that the French Communist Party is nothing else than the mindless instrument of Moscow which is being used to further Russian interests and not the interests of the French people. It is also clear that the only hope of preventing a return of General de Gaulle to power after the next parliamentary elections is in the resurrection of the Front Populaire on which M. Leon Blum burned his fingers many years ago. Thus it is that the French Communists, in a sudden about face, are now once more paying assiduous court to M. Leon Blum, parroting his vocabulary, and appealing to him to save the French working classes from the threat of Caesarism.

Yet it was only two weeks ago that the French Communists, through their representatives, were singing an entirely different tune about M. Blum. The MM. Duclos and Fajon, French Communist leaders, were signatories to the manifesto announcing the creation of the new Communist Information Bureau, which is to all intents and purposes nothing but the old Comintern. The manifesto declared that—

> The anti-imperialist, democratic camp has to close its ranks . . . and to work out its tactics against American imperialism, against its English and French allies, against the Right Wing Socialists above all in England and France . . . The Right Wing Socialists are the traitors in this common cause . . . The French Socialists and the British Laborites—M. Ramadier, M. Blum, Mr. Attlee and Mr. Bevin—facilitate by their servile placidity the fulfillment of American capitalistic aims, encouraging it to blackmail, and pushing their own countries on the road to vassallike dependence on the United States of America.

That was the party line as of midnight Saturday. The party line as of yesterday is sufficiently indicated by an editorial on the French elections in the New York Daily Worker

> The working class parties totaled 51 per cent of the four million votes thus far counted, divided as follows: Communist, 29.7 per cent; Socialist, 20.6 . . . This means that despite a hysterical campaign against the "Communist menace" and the usual scare propaganda of the reactionaries, the French working class held solid as a rock . . . The election figures show that a united working class could be the majority group in France. This is the big need now in the defense of the French Republic. (Italics ours.)

Whatever MM. Blum and Ramadier may decide about the advisability of another popular front, the sickening contrast of the Communists' language of last week and their language today has cost them a loss of "face" everywhere in Europe. The hypocritical opportunism behind all of their movements is now naked for all to behold. The situation in which the Communists find themselves in France—the necessity of eating their words and going hat in hand to the Socialist "traitors"—is not very different from the situation to which their international diplomacy has led them. They have, as we say, outsmarted themselves, and it is by no means the first time that they have done so.

Civilian Rule

A lot of murmuring may be heard from time to time against military occupation of jobs which are not normally considered within the scope of military responsibility in a democracy. The fact is that the Department of the Army wants to get rid of many of these extra-military tasks, such as, for instance, the governance of the occupied countries. Several times General Eisenhower, a believer in the shoemaker sticking to his last, has tried to shift the responsibility for government in Germany to the State Department. To all his pleas, however, there has been a negative reply, and another such reply, evidently, has just been returned, with a flat statement from the State Department that a change-over is "indefinitely postponed."

It is highly unfortunate that the State Department cannot assume this duty in Germany. The explanation is that it has neither the personnel nor the other facilities to administer the American zone in Germany. But the alternative is anachronistic. In one capacity in Germany, the Army is part of the government; in another, it is the Army of Occupation. It is compelled, in other words, to act as a government in passing upon appropriations which it will use as an army. This is a ridiculous situation, and should have been corrected a long time ago. We need all the genius of our Army to be concentrated on the problems of occupation. For our troops, either as constabulary or soldiers, are bound to be in Germany for some years to come.

This we shall say no matter whether Soviet Russia at the November meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers proposes troop withdrawal from Germany as it already has in the case of Korea. A new situation has been created in Germany. Marshal von Paulus and General von Sedlitz, two of the generals that Russia kept for the purpose of setting up a Free German Committee, are said already to have trained a Germany army of 80,000 men. If the news is correct, Soviet Russia is reneging on her pledge to keep Germany disarmed, and it would be the height of folly to pull out our own troops in such circumstances. On the contrary, we need to stay more than ever on the alert, certainly not to let the Army disperse its energies between government and occupation.

APPRENTICE

"You can do what you like with them," he said,
Speaking of words, and showed me how to twist
A colored scarf of shimmering gold and red
Out of the word for love. His agile wrist
Spun words like globes of colored fruit, each one
Leaping and shining in the breathless air
To prove to me how well it might be done,
Much like a juggler at a country fair.

And I, with soul and body full of you,
Thinking how you would laugh to see them spin,
Loving me for my skill, as children do,
Was eager and impatient to begin,
Forgetting the incalculable span
Required to make a poet of a man.

Need For Information

Still in the hospital after the amputation of both my legs, I have much time for reading and meditation. Since I have a fair knowledge of English and French, my friends occasionally supply me with American, English and French newspapers and periodicals, as far as they are available for Germans. Unfortunately there are no American newspapers on sale in Germany at present, nor periodicals such as Life or the Saturday Evening Post. This is very deplorable since the number of potential readers is much greater in Germany than in most of the other European countries, where American newspapers are already sold at reasonable prices.

It may be that the question of payment is the only reason for this regrettable situation, but I think that within the huge dollar budget at the disposal of the western zone it should be possible to earmark a modest amount for financing the import of American newspapers, periodicals or other reading matter of specific interest.

I am sure that the effect of such a positive propaganda for the benefits of the democratic system and the superiority of institutions based on this system would be more far-reaching than the somewhat dubious effect hitherto attained via the German press, which apparently believes it can successfully propagate democratic ideals by merely reiterating the sins of the Nazi system.

As for myself, I have never been a Nazi and I can prove it, but I cannot agree with the now generally employed practice to call every patriotic (this is no synonym for militaristic) German a "Nazi" and every Nazi a war criminal. The vast majority of the German people did not really know anything about the atrocities committed by a gang of political criminals and their henchmen, for anybody who knew and had dared to speak of those things in public would have been arrested for Greuelpropaganda within a few hours.

Moreover, the German people had of necessity to base their judgment of the political events which led to World War II on the official information supplied by the Reichsrundfunk and the Goebbels press. Therefore they could not have the impression of waging an aggressive war, but rather thought they were fighting for their national existence.

I am sure that in spite of many disappointments the majority of the German people is still honestly willing to participate in the political and economic system as represented by the great democracies of the West—and would even be ready to help defend the liberties of the individual against the onslaught of collectivism if need be. But further impoverishment and lack of a really convincing intellectual guidance will necessarily tend to encourage those circles who are still confident of the final triumph of communism.

The Clean Plate

When my American husband, who had spent his youth in France, came to live in New York with his American father and his French mother they were shocked at the amount of food left on the plates at dinners and luncheons.

Soon after my marriage my husband and I made a visit to my new family, who were then living in Paris. But before leaving the steamer that carried us across the Atlantic my husband made me understand that I must eat all the food I had taken on my plate at every meal at home or with friends.

Many dinners were given in my honor that spring. I remembered not leaving a "clean plate" was considered gross impoliteness and was as if I had said I did not like the dishes my hostess had prepared for my pleasure.

"Returns The Revolution"

An excerpt from your editorial "Returns the Revolution" of October 7, came to my attention recently.

You can have no idea of how heartening it is to us who live so near to the shadow of Europe, that in my native country a great newspaper circulates news on true humane principals.

You have sounded the true note to which men and women of caliber throughout the world, will always respond. Give out on the same lines more of this matter which will bring the desperate condition of men, women and children to the understanding of the American public.

Even here in Tangier amidst plenty, there are human beings who exist on the barest substance. Feed one among them for even a few days, and his or her entire outlook on life becomes more friendly.

Starvation does drive the masses into the arms of communism. The masses forget that few return to the free world. They do not even question why.

So please keep up your wonderfully clear reasoning which goes straight to the heart of the matter, and to the hearts of my fellow countrymen.

Segregation

Segregation should bring better results if it is directed to separating the good from the bad. Restrictions for good residential districts and social organizations should regard goodness as the determining factor, not the place of birth, or complexion of the skin, or religion. That might do better than all religions have done thus far.

Bridge Bottleneck

Must we wait for the completion of one of the coming new bridges across the Potomac before we may expect an orderly and reasonably speedy return to our Virginia homes via 14th st?

We, who live in Virginia, have seen the rapid increase in traffic in the past several years, especially since the war. The completion of the bridges planned is no doubt in the distant future. Why not ask the District of Columbia Director of Traffic to spare us one traffic officer each evening during rush hours who could, with proper placement of the District's tow truck or a "street closed sign," control traffic from both 14th st. and the Basin. With traffic from each direction, channeled into two lanes and allowed to flow alternately at the forking point, there would no longer be that mad scramble of four and five lanes of traffic endeavoring to converge into two lanes to cross 14th st. bridge.

The enforcement of the maximum speed and correct spacing of cars while crossing the bridge would also aid considerably.

Integrated Aid Action

Letters to The Washington Post protesting aid for foreign recovery show a complete lack of knowledge of the facts and/or an unwillingness to face them. Were they typical of the views in this country, future historians would certainly say that at a time for greatness we hadn't grown up to the responsibilities the war thrust upon us.

I refuse to believe that such views are typical. I believe that most people in this community of united states (lower case used advisedly) are enough interested in a community of united nations to help our neighbors abroad.

But, voluntary measures are like trying to clean the Washington Monument with a toothbrush. They take too long and they are inefficient.

The executive branch of the Government must present an integrated and coordinated plan of short-term and long-term action to the people. Congress must be called into session at once to enact that plan and to impose the controls without which any plan will fail.

Farm Labor Program

I have read with much interest the series of articles on the farm labor problem by Mrs. Agnes Meyer which appeared in The Washington Post recently. It is very significant that Mrs. Meyer's conclusion that the present farm labor program carried on by the Extension Service should be continued and administered by the Extension Service, which she reached as a result of her independent survey, agrees with the conclusion reached by the elected representatives of 1,128,000 farm families in 45 States and Puerto Rico at the 1946 annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation, which likewise urged that this farm labor program be continued through the Extension Service.

Farmers everywhere appreciate the great service which the Agricultural Extension Service did during and since the war in the recruitment, training, and placement of agricultural workers. The great majority of farmers would like to see the Extension Service continue to handle this program permanently, with appropriate adjustments to peacetime requirements.

Farmers are strongly opposed to turning this program over to the Federal and State Employment Services. As Mrs. Meyer has pointed out so ably, the Employment Service is not equipped to do this job successfully, whereas the Extension Service has a force of trained, experienced personnel already on the job. The Extension Service is in daily contact with farm people, assisting them with all their farm problems, and it has the complete confidence of our farmers. Farmers are accustomed to looking to them for guidance and assistance on their farm problems. The Extension Service can render this assistance to farmers and farm workers at the least cost and with the maximum results.

The American Farm Bureau Federation strongly supported the Capper-Hope bills (S. 1334 and H. R. 3367) during the first session of Congress. They would provide for a permanent farm labor program through the Extension Service. It is unfortunate that Congress failed to pass these bills and, instead, voted funds to permit the Federal and State Employment Services to take over this program when the temporary program now being carried on by the Extension Service expires on December 31, 1947.

This is an act of gross ingratitude to the Extension Service, which has performed such outstanding service during and since the war. It is also a great disservice to farmers and farm workers, who ask that the farm labor program be administered by the Extension Service, an agency which is fully informed and familiar with the problems and needs of agriculture. We sincerely hope that Congress will correct this situation by passing legislation along the lines of the Capper-Hope bills early next session.

Family Budget And Taxes

By Malvina Lindsay

Little Man's Load

MANY ARE wondering whether the commjttee of experts which has just concluded its study of Federal tax reforms has given any attention to the changing family life of those small wage earners, the Smiths and the Browns.

The Smiths have three small children and another on the way. The Browns' three teen-age children are set on going to college, and their high school and other expenses are such that Mrs. Brown has gone to work. The Browns also contribute to the support of elderly parents.

The split income tax proposal, of which we are hearing so much now, would help some couples—those with net taxable incomes of $5000 or more—to get into lower tax brackets. But the Smiths and Browns would gain only pittances, if anything, by it. However, Federal adoption of the community property system, now practiced in 13 States, would be a windfall to the Greens and the Joneses. The Greens are both employed, Mr. Green at a high salary, a[illegible] splitting his income with h[illegible] for tax purposes he would pr[illegible] much lower tax rates. The Jo[illegible] would profit even more since [illegible] Jones doesn't work, except to c[illegible] a few stock coupons, and Mr. Jones has a large salary, plus substantial dividends.

SOME proposal along this line seems to have a good chance of passage at the next session of Congress since it has been widely approved by legislators, and since the 35 States not having the split income tax advantage now have to carry a greater share of the Federal tax burden.

However, the proposal will meet opposition, since it would mean a loss in Federal revenue, would discriminate against unmarried persons, especially those who have dependents, and would present complications in divorce and inheritance. Hence some support is developing for a return to the mandatory joint income returns against which women's organizations made an effective fight in the 1930s. Under this plan the Browns, by pooling their incomes, would move to a slightly higher tax bracket, the Greens and the Joneses to much higher ones, and the United States Treasury would profit.

But several women's national organizations are whetting their axes to go after such a proposal. They regard it as a dangerous economic step backward for their sex, for whose property rights they have battled for more than a century. (Their first victory came in 1832 when Mississippi gave married women the right to manage their own property and make contracts.) They point out that in some States even yet a husband can collect his wife's wages.

In fact, some women leaders feel that both the community property system and the mandatory joint returns are threats to the individual rights and economic personalities of both wives and husbands. They would continue the present system by which husband and wife may report their earnings individually.

WHAT TAX relief the Browns and Smiths get will depend more on whether tax exemptions for family heads with small incomes are raised. The current increase in babies and the high cost of rearing and educating children make this especially needed. Single persons with small incomes, many of whom are now helping support longer lived parents also need exemptions raised.

Another tax injustice small wage earners face is that such small allowance is given them for dependents not under their roofs. And they receive no allowances—as in the case of the Browns—for relatives they help, but for whom they do not provide more than half the support. And the Greens, with a good income but not wealthy, can deduct tax credit only if they give to organized charity, not if they help a needy individual, as a young relative needing education.

If the Smiths and Browns are ill they must be desperately so—at least to a cost of 5 per cent of their incomes—to get any allowance for medical expenses. Yet they are constantly being advised to keep themselves and children in good trim, in order to be physical assets to their nation.

Mrs. Brown cannot make any tax deduction for her uniforms under cost of overhead. But Mr. Jones, business executive, can get tax reduction for himself or firm for money spent taking "contacts" to expensive hotels for lunch or drinks, for buying gifts of cigars, candy or nylons. Nor can Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Green, modern working wives with special skills, deduct as business expense what they pay for running their households while at work.

These tax inequities are a warning that the tax structure if it is to have a firm basis must be reformed in other fields than those relating to such things as capital gains and earnings, stock options and corporate earnings.

Calling Washington

Britain's Strained Military Power

LONDON.—A headline in the Sunday Times, "Home Fleet Cut to Five Vessels, Not One Battleship on Active Strength," shook Britons from one end of this island to the other. The ancient symbols of British power seem to be passing swiftly.

CHILDS

All the opposition papers have now taken up the Sunday Times scoop. They are uttering loud outcries of anger and dismay. But the question is whether this is a real shift, indicating a weakening of British power, or merely a decision to dispense with costly tokens of past grandeur and might.

Rumors long have been prevalent of how deeply the Labor government had cut into the navy. When Minister of Defense A. V. Alexander appeared before a naval reserve dinner, he was heckled, which was an almost unprecedented violation of traditional navy restraint. The alert United States Navy staff here had advance information of the cuts and was disturbed at the extent of the cutting.

The claim within the government, however, is that all possible resources must be allocated to research and new development. It is impossible to support weapons of the past and at the same time prepare weapons of the future which are enormously costly in resources and manpower.

That is the real meaning of the cuts in the British navy. Research and development are being pushed here to the fullest extent possible, given the harsh necessities of the British economy in a period of critical transition. In the same way and for the same reasons, long-term government expenditures are being concentrated in South Africa with the goal of eventually having a new major source of raw materials.

CUTS THAT will vitally affect the United States are those now being made in the British army. Lord Montgomery, chief of the Imperial General Staff, is engaged in cutting the force to approximately 200,000, which was the prewar strength of the army.

British forces are still extended in various parts of the world to a strength three to four times that which can be sustained in peace. They must be removed as the cuts are made. This will put responsibility squarely up to the USA.

All British forces are to be removed from Palestine in coming months. The controversy before the United Nations on Palestine's future can delay the evacuation, but not for long.

Departure of the British forces will leave a significant vacuum in the Near East. Some top British policy-makers take a gloomy view of what may happen after the vacuum is created. They go so far as to say that Palestine will become a communist state.

At the same time, they are aware of the important stake in Near East oil being developed by American firms. That oil is considered essential to the operation of the United States Navy in the Near East and Far East. That is why every sign of American action or inaction on Palestine and the Near East is being watched so closely here.

Montgomery has received an operational order to remove British troops from Greece. Only a small force is left there, but removal of this token army would cause an upheaval in Greece, with repercussions throughout the Balkans. The order can, of course, be countermanded from the highest level.

THE SHARPEST issue of the moment is over the payment for British troops occupying Germany. The British have told Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American Military Governor, that it's impossible to continue paying for their occupying army in dollars or in sterling convertible into dollars. The reply is that Britain made a firm agreement to provide 320 million dollars yearly for an occupying force.

The likeliest outcome is a compromise under which the British would pay down a lump sum for current costs, with the understanding that no further payments would be possible. The cost of the British occupying army is nearly one fifth of Britain's two billion deficit of dollars.

There is still another child of trouble that Congress will find on its doorstep. It is almost as urgent as relief for Europe.

While there is a realistic awareness here of what Britain faces, there is none of the hysteria such as is spread in the United States by cheap sensation-mongers. Those best informed through world-wide intelligence, both public and confidential, do not believe in the imminence of war. Top officials, military and civilian, believe Russia does not want war. In fact, beneath all the bluster of words, the signs point in exactly the opposite direction.

It is for the longer future that Britain is trying to prepare, by strengthening her economy and basing her armed forces on a sound structure which will be capable of maintaining maximum security measures without undue strain. Whether that will be possible, no one can say, so grave is the position into which this country has come. But at least that is the reasonable and realistic objective at which responsible men are aiming.

Which Way France?

By Barnet Nover

Source Of De Gaulle's Strength

FINAL RETURNS from the French municipal elections of October 19 underline the unprecedented nature of the victory won by Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Reunion of the French People or RPF.

NOVER

This movement was only an idea in De Gaulle's mind when he got up to make a speech at Strasbourg last April. It is now, by a wide margin, the most important political force in France, having in these six months outdistanced all the old-line parties.

AN ANALYSIS of the sources of De Gaulle's political strength, as revealed in the election returns, point to some very significant conclusions.

In the first place, it is clear that the largest percentage (though by no means all) of the voters who this time cast their ballots for the De Gaulle group had voted for the Popular Republicans (MRP) in the general elections of November, 1946.

In the period following liberation, the MRP was the nearest thing to a Gaullist Party to be found in France.

THE ELECTION returns also reveal, however, that De Gaulle exerted a very powerful pull on the splinter parties of the Center and the Right.

Most of them, including Edouard Herriot's misnamed Radical Socialists, once the leading party in France, practically disappeared from sight in the municipal elections as a result of the Gaullist tidal wave.

In Paris, for instance, the vote of these splinter parties in 1946 totaled 490,892. This time all these groups together polled only around 46,000 votes. It is a fair assumption that the overwhelming majority of them who went to the polls on October 19 voted for the candidates of the RPF.

IF WE MAKE allowance for a decline of around 13 per cent in the vote cast this time compared with the vote cast in Paris in November, 1946, it is a fair assumption that around 90 per cent of the De Gaulle vote came from the MRP and the Rightist groups.

Where did the other 10 per cent come from?

An examination of the election returns, particularly from Paris, provides us with a clew to what potentially, at least, is a phenomenon of extraordinary significance.

IN 1946 the Communists polled a total of 400,700 votes in Paris and became the dominant political element in no fewer than 60 Paris communes.

This time, the Communist strength in Paris declined to 324,149 votes, a drop of almost 20 per cent. Where did these former Communist votes go to?

By and large, they do not appear to have gone to the Socialists, whose vote between the elections of November, 1946, and October, 1947, fell in Paris from 164,281 to 103,369, a decline of 37.1 per cent. Clearly they did not go to the MRP, whose strength ebbed from 323,038 to 75,286.

The only conclusion that makes sense, therefore, is that an unknown but sizable number of former Communists or fellow travelers jumped on the De Gaulle anti-Communist bandwagon.

Nor did this happen in Paris alone. De Gaulle's strength was also manifested in other former Communist strongholds such as Le Creusot and Marseille.

In a very real sense, therefore, the De Gaulle movement may be said to have cut across party lines even though the chief source of his new-found strength is to be found in Center and Right groups. This is true of the men around him.

One of them, Guillaume de Benouville, who while in his early 30s was head of the military forces of the Resistance with the rank of brigadier general, was a former Royalist. Another, Andre Malraux, the writer, was a Communist who became disgusted with the party at the time of the Russian-German pact of 1939. Still another, Jacques Soustelle, a noted archeologist, was Leftist in his political leanings.

It remains to be seen what De Gaulle will do with his victory. To rally the French people is one thing. De Gaulle has twice proved he can do it, first at the time of the fall of France and again during these last months. But whether he can lead the political force he has created into constructive channels has yet to be demonstrated.

The Federal Diary

GSI Split over Raising Prices

THE QUESTION of a new rise in food prices has split officials of Government Services, Inc., operators of most cafeterias in Federal buildings.

Kluttz

In fact, a second GSI official last night warned that higher prices would have to be ordered to keep his agency from going bankrupt.

In this column yesterday, I quoted another GSI official who said he would oppose the proposed increase. Instead, he suggested the cafeteria operating loss could be offset by profits from park concessions.

But Samuel Goodacre, GSI comptroller, clashed with this view. And he cited figures. He said the cafeterias had showed a loss of $127,545 in the first nine months of this year, while park activities reported a profit of only $8924.

"You simply can't offset a $127,000 loss with an $8900 profit," he said dryly, and then he added, "with present labor and food costs, we can't continue to operate at our present food prices."

Goodacre said the question of higher food prices would have to be met soon by GSI. The matter, he said, is now being studied. The comptroller anticipates higher wage demands within the next month by GSI's organized employes which, he said, will further complicate GSI's financial position if they are granted.

THE PRESIDENT yesterday rejected a request by Chairman Hoffman to allow his House Expenditures Committee to examine the Civil Service Commission's "loyalty lead" file. He wrote the House GOP leader:

"I believe it is in the public interest to keep Civil Service records confidential in the absence of a compelling reason to the contrary in a particular case."

The President's action closes the case, for the time being at least. However, Hoffman has threatened to subpena the records. If he does, the commission is prepared to take the controversy to the Supreme Court for a decision.

Meanwhile, the commission is stripping its files of all references to members of Congress. Also, it has an inquiry under way to determine how information in its "confidential" files on members of Congress leaked to Chairman Hoffman.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION will give 30-day dismissal notices this weekend to 100 part-time employes here. The bulk of the employes to be fired are veterans who attend schools and colleges here.

VA officials said the decision to wipe out its part-time staff had been made on two counts which are: (1) a recent ruling that part-time employes must be counted against the agency's personnel ceiling, and (2) that the part-time staff hadn't been as productive as had been hoped.

LOYALTY: President Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission, yesterday had some sane words to say about the President's Federal worker loyalty program. And that's refreshing, indeed, in these uncertain days. Mitchell told the Pittsburgh convention of the National League of District Postmasters:

That it was his opinion that not more than a fraction of 1 per cent of the employes would have to be further investigated, and that the persons found to be disloyal will be only a small fraction of those investigated. He urged that every precaution be taken to protect innocent people.

Mitchell said his commission was again building up its staff of investigators which had been cut down by budget cuts from 800 during the war to about 100.

A GOVERNMENT spokesman yesterday described as "union fire" a report that "security" firings in Central Intelligence Agency had resulted from a slowdown in its foreign broadcast intelligence branch during the Paris Conference of Foreign Ministers. He said no evidence had been unearthed in the Central Intelligence investigation to support the charge.

However, there is no doubt of this—that AFL's right-wing American Federation of Government Employes had been feuding with CIO's left-wing United Public Workers in the agency. Both union had locals in the foreign broadcast unit.

AFGE members who fought the UPWA and its policies charge they were either eased out of their jobs, or else life was made uncomfortable for them, resulting in their resignations. They also charge that UPWA had the sympathy of several Central Intelligence officials.

The AFGE local has folded. Now, several UPWA members and at least one Central Intelligence official who is said to have been biased in favor of UPWA members have been fired on "security" charges.

Incidentally, AFGE members have made similar charges against another Federal agency—Public Housing Administration. In the shakedown of this agency it's said that UPWA members have been kept in preference to AFGE members. Housing officials hotly deny the charge. However, a congressional committee is now looking into the matter.

Winter Coal Supply Topic Of Talk Today

Secretary of Interior Krug is expected to appeal today to coal producers, dealers and shippers to take steps to minimize fuel shortages during the coming winter.

Coal officials, including representatives of the miners and the public, are scheduled to meet today, first with James H. Boyd, director of the Bureau of Mines, and later with Krug.

Officially, the gathering is to consider the problems of the winter's fuel supply. But, it was learned, Krug hopes to effect an agreement on a more efficient way of handling coal shipping and distribution.

Interior Department experts privately admit that the situation is serious. It centers, they say, on problems of shipping, with the shortages threatened principally in the Middle West, and involving higher grades of coal.

Foreign buyers, as well as dealers supplying chemical and household users, are vigorously bidding for this coal, mined principally in the East. Shortage of coal cars intensifies the problem.

The group called together to discuss the situation represent the same interests that formerly constituted the now-defunct Solid Fuels War Council.

Meanwhile, Krug also invited the petroleum industry to advise the Government what can be done about prospective oil and gas shortages for the next 12 months.

He asked the National Petroleum Council for its views "as to general types of actions that can be taken individually by the various units of the industry to alleviate the situation," and for advice "as to whether some form of concerted action would further relieve the situation."

Egypt Plans Cholera War Martial Law

Cairo, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—The Egyptian government is considering a declaration of martial law for the entire country to help stamp out the scourge of cholera, high quarters said today.

Deaths in the last 24 hours numbered 342, with 767 new cases reported. This was a sharp drop from the previous 24 hours, when 561 deaths and 1022 new cases were reported.

The decree would be aimed directly at doctors, soldiers and policemen who accept bribes to permit travel out of quarantine areas.

The two hardest hit provinces are Dakahlieh and Gharbish, in the delta area.

Ignorance helps to spread the plague. A health inspector in densely populated Dakahlieh asked a peasant couple "where is your son?"

The peasants mumbled that their son had gone away, far away. He would be back.

The inspector looked around. Under a pile of straw, half submerged in the drinking water, was the body of the son.

Twenty-seven persons drank from the well. All 27 caught the disease.

Guards at the entrance to Cairo today found two cholera corpses intended for burial, concealed under a load of vegetables being brought into the city for sale.

In a downtown cafe a man suddenly writhed, shuddered, vomited and died. Fifteen yards away, onlookers drank coffee, munched sandwiches and smoked pipes, unheeding the flies that buzzed from the corpse to their own food and faces. Flies spread cholera.

Emergency Welfare Program For Migrant Workers Studied

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

A citizens' conference began work here yesterday on an emergency welfare program for the country's 2½ million migrant farm workers.

The conference hoped to help the workers meet the crisis brought on by the closing down of the Federal farm labor camps. Also being drafted are a long-range program of wage and welfare laws and a permanent organization to deal with migrant labor matters.

Howard Whitman told the conference of shocking conditions he found in a survey on which he based a series of articles in Collier's magazine.

Tells of Squalor

Whitman said he found migrant farm workers living in worse filth and squalor in America than people he saw in North Africa. He told of a score of families living in one big shed, with dirt floors, no heat, no windows and no inside walls except chicken-wire partitions between the family sections. Another time, he said, he found two families—21 persons in all—living in an abandoned boxcar.

Crew bosses round up many of the migrant work gangs, Whitman said, drawing upon Mexican, Negro and poor white groups. Once hired, they are hauled across the country in trucks—for which they are charged—and out to work where they are needed in harvests. The crew bosses often make big profits, Whitman found, but the workers seldom have anything left at the end of a season. Mostly they lack health services and their children do not go to school, but work alongside their parents.

Funds Lacking

Closing of the 52 permanent and 70 temporary work camps will make this condition worse. Congress has cut off the funds for running the camps after January 30 next year, and ordered them sold in the next year and a half.

Undersecretary of Labor David Morse told the conference his department simply has not the money to do much for the migrant workers. Morse added that these problems raised by these workers are here to stay, as the migrant farm hand seems to be a stable factor in the American method of harvesting crops.

"That involves a terrible cost in human misery which should be corrected," Morse said.

Determining the national policy toward such labor is a job for Congress, and not for administrators, he commented.

The conference applauded Whitman's suggestion that committees of Senators and Congressmen ought to investigate the problem first hand.

Priest Heads Group

The Rev. William J. Gibbons, S. J. of the American Press, New York, heads a committee to draft the emergency program.

Dr. Paul Taylor, economics professor at the University of California, and Edith E. Lowry, executive sercetary of the Home Missions Council of Narth America, New York, head a group drawing up proposals for minimum wage laws, social security and other safeguards for the migrants.

Elizabeth Magee, secretary of the National Consumers League, Cleveland, is chairman of the committee on proposals to set up a permanent council of 100.

All three groups are due to report today, to sessions of the conference at the National Educational Association, 16th and M sts. nw.

Death for Racketeers

Prague, Oct. 22.—To curb increasing black market activities in Czechoslovakia, Communist Minister of the Interior Vaclav Nosek proposed yesterday that the death penalty be invoked against the most "flagrant" illegal operators.

Few Changes Due In Credit Terms

Dealer Caution, Scarcity of Goods Expected To Brake Installment Buying After Nov. 1

Dealer caution and a scarcity of goods will put temporary brakes on installment buying when credit curbs end November 1, Washington merchants indicated yesterday.

Wartime regulations restricted installment buying on automobiles and household appliances to a third down payment and 15 months to pay; on furniture and rugs to one fifth down and 15 months to pay.

Automobile financing corporations and store credit managers yesterday declared there will be no great broadening of credit terms.

Virtually all automobile paper will be written on a third down basis, the finance corporations indicated, but three of the four largest said some terms may go up to 24 months to pay.

Howard L. Wynegar, president of the Commercial Credit Corp., said: "We are opposed to the practice of selling terms instead of merchandise."

In the household appliance and furniture field, the same restraint was voiced. One credit manager said credit men generally have agreed that down payments should be cut to 20 per cent, rather than the one third down payment ordered on appliances during controls.

He said he did not expect a rush of installment buying, but anticipated increases as goods become more plentiful.

Another large store credit manager said: "If people want easier credit terms, we'll give them to them, but we do not plan to make capital out of the end of control."

If uncontrolled credit terms are applied in auto and household goods financing as stated:

1. You will be able to buy an automobile (when they're available) at the same one third down on new cars, slightly less on good used ones and get from 18 to 24 months to pay.

2. Household furniture and appliances will sell on terms of 20 per cent down and up to 18 months to pay. Some stores voiced a willingness to make exceptions to established, good accounts and raise payment terms to as high as 24 months.

Expert Advocates Quick Expansion Of Aero Research

One of the Nation's outstanding aeronautical engineers recommended to the President's Air Policy Commission Tuesday that the Nation expand its research facilities as best it can now rather than wait for a perfect plan.

This view was expressed by Arthur E. Raymond, engineering vice president of Douglas Aircraft Co. Inc., Santa Monica, Calif. He testified in hearings aimed at developing a national aviation policy for the future.

"We should exploit to the greatest extent possible," Raymond said, "the research possibilities of some of the smaller educational institution. The program must be on a long-enough basis to permit them to build up the necessary expert personnel."

Convict Operated On for 2 Razors, 401 Nails, Bolts

Lansing, Kans., Oct. 22 (AP).—An operation in which 3½ pounds of metal objects—nails, screws and safety razors —were removed from the stomach of a Kansas State inmate was disclosed today.

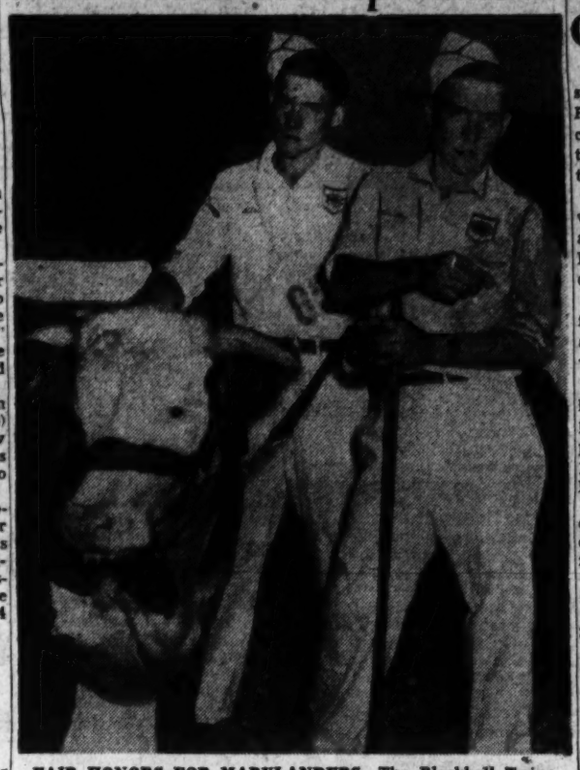
Warden Robert H. Hudspeth said the convict's stomach yielded: 401 nails of assorted sizes, two complete safety razors without blades, five metal washers, a three-inch screw, two stove bolts about two inches long, a two-inch nut, a large brass washer, 11 thumb tacks, a quarter-inch screw, and 60 small metal objects ranging from paper clips to safety pins.

The convict, identified as James S. Payne, serving a one to five year term for arson, gave no reason for consuming the metal.

Ex-Captain Sentenced

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 22 (AP).—A 37-year-old former Army captain who admitted raising the amount of a mustering-out check from $100 to $28,000, was sentenced here to serve a year and a day in a Federal penitentiary. The former officer, Frederick H. Kirch, was arrested last May while honeymooning in Bermuda. He once was an Annapolis midshipman.

Maryland U. Twins Running Close Race in Accomplishments



FAIR HONORS FOR MARYLANDERS—The Blackhall Twins, William (left) and Alexander, of Faulkner, Charles County, Md., both have won scholarship awards for their outstanding 4-H Club work. At the Timonium Fair they won the beef championship with their entry. Both are University of Maryland students

The Blackhall twins of Charles County, Md., aren't carbon copies but they seem to keep close to each other in accomplishments. Both are students at University of Maryland.

Alexander Blackhall, better known as Sandy, has been awarded a college scholarship of $100 a year for the four-year course by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. He isn't getting ahead of William, the other twin, though. Bill was awarded a Sears Roebuck Foundation college scholarship just a few weeks ago.

The twins are freshmen in the College of Agriculture and have been in 4-H Club work for about six years. They were awarded scholarships on the basis of outstanding work.

In 1946 they won prizes with a 4-H Club steer in shows at Baltimore and Richmond and this year they showed the champion beef animal at Timonium Fair. Bill has been president of the Charles County 4-H Club Council and both are members of the Maryland All-Stars.

They were the winning beef cattle judging team at the 1946 Future Farmers of America convention and have earned part of their college expenses through 4-H Club projects.

Bill now is in Kansas City as the representative of Glasva High School Chapter of the FFA at the national convention of the Future Farmers of America.

Strike Is Threatened On New Haven Railroad

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 22 (U.P.).—A paralysis of railroad traffic in four States was forecast tonight by General Chairman J. J. Hammill of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen as he announced that more than 94 per cent of the union members on the "New Haven" road favored a strike.

Final tabulations of the strike vote which showed that more than 4730 union members approved of a walkout were forwarded to National President A. F. Whitney in Cleveland. Hammill said Whitney's approval of the walkout was a formality. The actual strike will take place in about a week, said Hammill.

GWU Researcher Analyzes Traffic Jams Mathematically

Motorists may be consoled with the confirmation that there are traffic jams. A George Washington University researcher has proved it, mathematically.

Dr. Bruce D. Greenshields, university associate professor of civil engineering, outlines his findings in a 152-page report entitled "Traffic Performance at Urban Intersections."

He leaves the solutions, recommending that they be done mathematically, to traffic engineers.

Traffic, he shows by complicated charts, can be calculated to a nicety by scientific motion-picture-taking, intricate formulas, and graph paper.

Wallace L. Braun, deputy traffic director for the District of Columbia, confessed yesterday that he had "just about glanced through" Dr. Greenshields' study.

"The photographic technique used by Dr. Greenshields probably gives a more exact measurement of timing traffic flow," he declared. "But the whole thing is a rather deep analysis of intersection behavior. Its exact mathematical analysis is probably too detailed far general usage."

Traffic data was tabulated from observations of projections on a screen on which a grid of the intersection under study had already been drawn. Thus, the vehicle placement in successive frames could be measured to determine speed and position.

The researchers took pictures in Washington, Hartford, Conn., and as far West as Norwalk, Ohio.

They came up with some enlightening facts. For instance, they found that the first car waiting for a green light averages about 3.8 seconds in getting away. It only seems longer to the horn-blower second in line.

GPO to Fete Miss Hartley On Retirement

Miss Eunice F. Hartley, 70, who started work at the Government Printing Office when printing machines were steam-driven and linotypes "new-fangled," will retire tomorrow.

Friends and fellow employes will honor her at a banquet this afternoon in the GPO cafeteria. Her retirement will bring to a close 45 years of service.

She plans to spend her time from now on relaxing at her home at 513 A st. se., where she lives with her sister, Miss Dora Hartley.

A native of the District, Miss Eunice Hartley attended the old Eastern High School at 8th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se. and the old Business High School at 1st st. and Indiana ave. se.

An old school motto: "Our school days are all the hours and days of our existence," was the guiding factor in her career, she said.

During her many years of service, she held positions in the bindery, GPO; bindery, Library; Superintendent of Documents, Production Manager's Office, Purchasing Division and the Accounts Division, from which she retires.

Retentiveness of Human Mind Demonstrated at Lecture Here

They have started selling short courses on long memories here.

Dr. Bruno Furst of New York, who holds there is always room in the mind for one more memory, opened the Washington frontier in human retentiveness Tuesday night with a lecture-demonstration which proved his point.

The curious, the interested and those who didn't forget the time and place filled the Willard Hotel's Congressional Room. It was a free introduction to the new Memory Associates, a school of memory training in the National Press Building.

Milton S. Moskowitz, 26-year-old pharmacy student at George Washington University, who had spent 45 minutes of strict attention to the current issue of Life magazine, told the audience what appeared on any page of the issue they cared to call.

Arthur S. Rauch, now studying for his master's degree in psychology at George Washington and who is a director of the new school, presented a few choice excerpts from the 1940 World Almanac. Given the name of a city, he called the population to the final digit.

Strangers in the audience stood, called out their names and sat down—a dozen or more. Ted Miller, 26, of 601 Park rd. nw., a pre-law student at George Washington, identified each as they all stood again.

mitted that she "knew" the location of several numbers headquarters in Arlington.

Political Motive Changed

Meantime, County Board Member P. Freelan Chew, one of the witnesses called to testify today, told reporters the subpena served on him "is a definite attempt to discredit me on the eve of an election."

He said he had "not the slightest idea" of why he has been called. Chew was present at two county board meetings at which an Arlington citizen, Manuel Lazo, had complained of unchecked county gambling.

But Chew said yesterday he could not understand "why all other board members' names were not submitted to the grand jury along with mine."

At the same time, Board Member Dugan said that if grand jury witnesses are "not afraid to talk," the probe "should uncover a clew to the solution of this mess."

The fact that four people, one of them a 15-year-old schoolgirl, had been threatened is indicative "that someone is in deadly fear of being exposed," Dugan said.

Maximum penalty for the two misdemeanors of operating a lottery and receiving horse bets is 15 months imprisonment and fines totaling $1000.

Arlington Ballot Listing Challenged By Oren Lewis

The order candidates' names are to appear on the official ballot for Arlington County's forthcoming election was challenged yesterday by Oren Lewis, Republican, candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney.

Although Electoral Board Secretary John W. Jackson announced that incumbents are to be listed first, Lewis charged the name of Democratic Candidate Denman Rucker precedes his own on the ballot.

Rucker, not an incumbent, is assistant to the Commonwealth's Attorney.

Correction

The Washington Post yesterday erroneously reported the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board had taken under advisement an application to transfer a Class A licensed liquor store from the D. C. Liquor Mart, Inc., 907 H st. nw., to a partnership of Charles and Morris Shoock at 2905 Georgia ave. nw.

An application has been filed to transfer the D. C. Liquor Mart to a partnership of Sarah and Joseph Footer on Mt. Olivet rd. ne. The application by the Shoock partnership asks for a transfer from 1317 13th st. nw. to the Georgia ave. address. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Spars to Mark Fifth Birthday

The fifth birthday of the Spars will be celebrated here next month when the Women's Reserve of the Coast Guard will hold its first national reunion over the weekend of November 22.

The opening banquet of the convention is scheduled for the Statler Hotel, when Dorothy C. Stratton, wartime captain and national director of the Spars, will make an address of welcome.

Plans of the committee include presentation of Victory Medals to the former servicewomen.

Pale Shade of Amber

Great Spectacle, Fierce Nonsense

By Richard L. Coe

"FOREVER AMBER," or "Up From Newgate," arrives this morning at the Palace—appropriate what?—and, as you can imagine, is a very flashy job, indeed.

In the tender hands of Twentieth Century-Fox, Amber is so scrubbed her reading fans will scarcely recognize her. Prodded by the Johnston Office, Amber's lovers have been cut down from roughly 28 to 5, or about par for the average Hollywood actress over a year's course with the gossip columnists.

While our reading of the Kathleen Winsor triumph has largely been confined to kibitzing on the Mount Pleasant streetcar, we can also report that, as Amber, Linda Darnell is more modest about her clothing and bathing habits than Miss Winsor created her. We'll never forget our dismay when one evening our seatmate closed his book just as Charles II was remarking: "Od's fish, madam, but this is the greatest display I've seen in public since . . ." The film offers nothing to explain this regal excitement.

The book aside—though the book is certainly why the film company spent what is variously reported as from three to five million bucks on the picture—how is "Amber" as a movie?

Beautiful to look at as a spectacle, unexciting as to story and really fierce nonsense to listen to.

A Choice Platitude

In one scene you find Amber and Bruce Carlton (No. 1 Man) facing each other after Capt. Rex Morgan (No. 2 Man—or thereabouts) has left the room, prepared for a duel-to-the-death with Carlton. Carlton, being the hero, obviously is in no danger, so he glares at Amber: "Between us we have destroyed something fine and beautiful." It's a noble platitude, to be sure, but what is it doing in that scene?

In another sequence you watch King Charles and his long-time mistress, the Countess of Castelmaine, in their chambers at Whitehall Palace. The countess has been preening herself, but Charles tells her he's taking his wife out that evening. "The Queen?" she screams. "You're not taking HER to the ball are you?" Since the queen is described as something resembling a Portuguese crow, it's rather like Hollywood to find her, in the ball scene, as a pretty brunette extra with no speaking lines. Had she been a name player, she hardly would have been so unpleasantly—and inaccurately—described.

But the line to be treasured in "Amber" comes from a seventeenth century aristocrat, who, complimented about a handsome bracelet, airily remarks: "Oh, that. It's just a trifle one of my ancestors brought back from the Crusades."

Stunning Spectacle

There's no denying that "Forever Amber" is a stunning spectacle. Its scenes of Restoration detail are enormously fascinating, with great hallways in massive woods (glaringly Technicolored), a performance of Shakespeare (Romeo and Juliet" holds little interest for Amber, whose eyes are fastened on the royal box) and some striking outdoor scenes. Since both the plague and Mr. Pepys' fire of 1666 come within the period, you can imagine the joy they've given Producer Darryl F. Zanuck.

"FOREVER AMBER." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization, produced for Darryl F. Zanuck by William Perlberg. Screenplay by Philip Dunne and Ring Lardner, jr., adapted from the Kathleen Winsor novel by Jerome Cady. Directed by Otto Preminger. Music by David Raksin. Technicolor by Natalie Kalmus. At the Palace.

THE CAST

Amber	Linda Darnell
Bruce Carlton	Cornel Wilde
Lord Almsbury	Richard Greene
King Charles II	George Sanders
Capt. Rex Morgan	Glenn Langan
Earl of Radcliffe	Richard Haydn
Nan Britton	Jessica Tandy
Mother Red Cap	Anne Revere
Black Jack Mallard	John Russell
Corinna	Jane Ball
Sir Thomas Dudley	Robert Coote
Matt Goodgroome	Leo G. Carroll
Countess of Castelmaine	Natalie Draper
Mrs. Spong	Margaret Wycherly
Lady Redmond	Alma Kruger
Lord Redmond	Edmond Breon
Landale	Alan Napier

The film's unexciting, cardboard quality comes from an attempt of the screenwriters (none other than Philip Dunne and Ring Lardner, jr. the latter of Capitol Hill fame) to include every possible episode from the book while at the same time watering down the flavor that must have given the original whatever vitality it had.

The casting finds Linda Darnell as beautiful as you'd expect though you can't avoid thinking that Glenn Langan would probably have made a better Bruce Carlton than the stiff Cornel Wilde. Langan ought to get some juicy parts after this one. Though Richard Green has been described as "one of Amber's lovers," she certainly doesn't give him a tumble. It's strictly platonic.

Best of the cast is George Sanders as Charles II, a suave, able portrait which no doubt would have pleased the merry monarch. The rest of the film he probably would have thought unbelievably stuffy and high-minded.

TOMORROW: With Esther Williams on stage and screen at the Capitol, Richard L. Coe, reviews her latest musical, "This Time for Keeps."

ESTHER'S HERE TODAY: Not only that, but yesterday Esther Williams remarked in public that for each of her four stage appearances at the Capitol (today only), she'll wind up in her swimming suit, which should be something to see. Miss Williams also is the star of the screen musical, "This Time for Keeps." Contrary to an earlier announcement, Dancer Ray McDonald will not be appearing with her

Precision by King-Smith Group

Excellently Stark Treatment Given Sartre's Hellish Trio

Jean-Paul Sartre's "No Exit" is being given a fine performance by the King-Smith group, Productions, Inc., in its small theater at the rear of 2118 Mass. ave.

While Sartre is best known for his theory of ethical behavior called "Existentialism," he is a much finer dramatist than the sea of words written by and about him suggests. His drama is an engrossing piece of theatricality.

New York saw the play last season for only four weeks. The three central characters were played by Annabella, Ruth Ford and Claude Dauphin. The reviews were "mixed," but found the play interesting. Because the play did not tour, it is a welcome one to find on the King-Smith agenda.

Sartre tells of three people in hell, a hell politely furnished, where, to save manpower, each person becomes another's tormentor. "Self-service," Sartre calls it, "just as in a cafeteria."

One is a collaborationist who was a cowardly editor and will remain a coward through eternity. The second person one sees is a Lesbian who has destroyed the love of another woman for her husband and driven her to suicide. The final member of the trio is another woman, a selfish wretch who killed her own baby and drove her lover to self-destruction. If she despises anything it is cowardice.

Appropriately Stark Treatment

This unlovely trio is together in a locked room for eternity. No tears can be shed in Sartre's hell and the characters must remain just what they've made themselves on earth. They rehash each action that has led them to this place, gradually revealing themselves as the wretches they are.

Such a play demands exactly the sort of production Director Mary Hunter and her associates have given it. In the past this group has affected a heavy stylization which has often been oppressive and pompous. This time the precise movements and stark treatment have exactly the right material.

Boris Tumarin is splendid as the man. While his physical characteristic is brute strength, his spirit is venal, ambitious and cowardly. Tumarin comes to King-Smith from appearances with the Equity's ambitious Library productions of last season. His ability makes the man seem strong on the surface, weak underneath, but always obsessed with troubles of the spirit.

Barbara Joyce is the vain, vicious woman who is entranced with her own beauty and the physical strength of men. Miss Joyce conjures the role effectively and makes a good deal of her melodramatic scenes.

Expertly Lighted

Beatrice Newport, who appeared in one of last year's self-conscious plays, does an equally effective portrait of the perverted woman, whose tragedy is her own bitter wisdom.

Charles Sladen completes the cast as the bellboy who sees to it hell's guests are ensconced in the proper rooms. Melvin Bourne's lighting for his stark, simple set is particularly noteworthy and Miss Hunter is to be congratulated on having produced a sordid dramatic trick with the melodramatic zing it should have to make a theatrical evening.

"No Exit" will continue in the tiny studio room through November 5, Monday nights excepted, with curtain time 8:50. The play, with one intermission, runs an hour and 35 minutes. Subscriptions for this and four other events may be obtained from the King-Smith School, although single admission tickets may be procured at the door.

Printers Ask Shop Barring Nonmembers

Baltimore, Oct. 22 (AP).—An "all-union shop" was put before the Government today by the International Typographical Union (AFL) as a substitute for the union's traditional closed shop, now banned by the Taft-Hartley law.

ITU President Woodruff Randolph testified at a National Labor Relations Board hearing that sample contracts providing for the "all-union" shop had been sent to 807 ITU locals as an answer to what he termed "union-busting tactics" of newspaper publishers and print shop owners.

The contracts include the clause: The employer "cannot compel members to work with nonunion printers and apprentices and therefore agrees that any refusal by its workers to work with nonunion employes shall not constitute a breach of this agreement."

None of these contracts have been signed by employers, "so far as I know," Randolph told Trial Examiner William R. Ringer.

The ITU and its Baltimore local are charged in an NLRB complaint with "failing to bargain collectively in good faith," on charges brought by the Graphic Arts League, representing 22 commercial printing shops.

The contract offer also contains a 60-day cancellation clause—the minimum strike notice period under the Taft-Hartley Act—because, Randolph said, "it puts the employer in a position where he is not likely to have union employes working for him if he hires nonunion help."

The ITU advised its locals "to stay away from the so-called union shop," Randolph said.

The "so-called union shop of the Taft-Hartley law does not permit the union to hold onto union conditions as we know it," he said.

Gerhard van Arkel, ITU counsey, earlier contended the NLRB is powerless to order the union to bargain, since ITU officers have yet to sign non-Communist affidavits, required under the new law before a union may use NLRB facilities.

NLRB counsel Sidney J. Barban also disclosed that when the Graphic Arts League filed charges September 12, Randolph "went so far as to say the board should turn over the charge to the Justice Department for criminal prosecution of Mr. Street (Francis E. Street, executive secretary of the league), on the grounds Street had made "false" statements in the charge.

CIO Union Votes to File Non-Communist Data

Boston, Oct. 22 (AP).—The CIO United Rubber Workers executive officers voted today to file non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley law, first major affiliate to announce action since the recent CIO national convention left that decision to individual unions.

The executive board of the 220,000-member union declared in a resolution that the group, which includes cork, linoleum and plastic workers "may be best protected by filing the necessary affidavits with the NLRB and the necessary reports with the Secretary of Labor."

The resolution called for "the fullest legally possible" support for the CIO Political Action Committee's drive for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, which was branded as "punitive, iniquitous and unworkable."

Labor Plans Political Action Parleys Here

By The Associated Press

Three wings of the house of labor—the Railway Brotherhoods, AFL and CIO—will hold important meetings before the end of the year to plan their political activities in 1948.

It seemed likely yesterday that all three groups will change their political methods in some way. The meetings are scheduled as follows:

Presidents of 20 unions of railroad workers will meet here November 12 and consider setting up a new and more vigorous political program. Rail unions long have been active in political campaigns, but have had no separate political organization to coordinate their efforts.

President of 100 AFL unions will meet here December 5 to work out the details of a new organization to be known as Labor's Educational and Political League (LEPL).

The 11-man executive committee of the CIO Political Action Committee will meet "in December or sooner," a spokesman said. The CIO-PAC made it clear at last week's CIO convention that it is changing its method, and from now on will put major emphasis on "block workers" who will try to get out the vote in their own blocks.

The 20 railway union presidents who will meet November 12 are the members of the Railway Labor Executives' Association.

A. E. Lyon, executive secretary of this association, told a reporter yesterday that:

"They will probably re-examine the unions' past policies and methods to determine what changes are necessary in order to be even more effective in the political field."

Lyon said that over a 30-year period, the rail unions have been more effective in politics than any other unions.

One factor in the present situation is that rail unions overlap with the AFL. Fifteen of the 20 unions represented in the Railway Labor Executives' Association are AFL unions, such as boilermakers, signalmen, switchmen, electricians.

The presidents of these unions will be taking part in the formation of AFL-LEPL, and also in the November discussions as to how the rail unions can best strengthen their own political program.

'Memory' Tube, Aid To Radar, Revealed

D. C. Inventor's Device Is Answer To Major Problem

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A "memory" tube designed to catch, retain, transcribe and transmit electric impulses was described by its inventor to radio scientists assembled here yesterday.

The long-sought device should prove an invaluable aid to radar operators plotting the course of guided missiles and for speeding up operations of present computing machines, said its inventor, Dr. Andrew Vasily Haeff of 1714 29th st. se.

Dr. Haeff, radio consultant for the Naval Research Laboratory, said the electronic tube solves one of the major problems of radar operators plagued by continuous movement of that spot of light on their screen that marks the "echo" of distant aircraft. The tube was developed at its laboratory here.

Image Can Be "Halted"

Using the "memory" tube, he said, radar operators can halt the image at will; by halting in sequence at prescribed time intervals, he said, the speed and direction of flight of the aircraft can be immediately determined—and interceptors directed to destroy it.

Dr. Haeff explained the principles of the new tube, about two foot long and five inches in diameter ,to members attending the final day of the three-day joint meeting of the International Scientific Radio Union (American section) and the Institute of Radio Engineers.

The new tube, similar in appearance to the ordinary cathode-ray tube used in modern television, employes three electron beams instead of the usual one. One "writes," or "paints," the image on a glass screen; the second holds it there, and the third "reads" it for transmission elsewhere.

Dr. Haeff said the image can be stored indefinitely or erased instantly by adjustment of the holding beam.

Calculations Speeded

The much-publicized "electronic brain" computer, ponderous calculating machine developed by the Navy at the University of Pennsylvania, is "slowed" by its mechanical means of storing partial solutions for later use in its calculating, Dr. Haeff declared.

By use of the new "memory" tube, he said, these stages are accomplished at electronic speed.

Another use of the "memory" tube, the inventor told the assembly, may be in the sending and receiving of coded messages by radio transmission routes.

It could also be used, he said, in "holding" a television scene or for determining instantly the winner of a photo-finish horse race.

Church Need For Program Told Synod

Roanoke, Va., Oct. 22 (AP).—The needs for the church to provide an enlarged program of religious education and guidance in colleges and to emphasize the importance of Christian social relations were emphasized at a joint session of the twentieth synod of the Episcopal Province of Washington and its women's organizations here this afternoon.

The Rev. Robert Whitman, of Williamsburg, told the meeting many students are not interested in that "so-called religion" which dwells upon the evils of smoking, dancing, and the like, and holds that anything that is pleasurable is of the devil.

He indicated that theology, which he called the "queen of the sciences," is being neglected in colleges generally, and that as a result students come out of school well trained in some particular field but not educated.

At yesterday's organization meeting, the Rev. Henry D. Phillips, D.D., of Roanoke, Bishop of Southwestern Virginia, was elected president of the Synod for a three-year term to begin at the current session.

Others officers elected: the Rev. Thimas J. Bigham of Pittsburgh, secretary; Horace L. Varian, Baltimore, treasurer; and Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, bishop of Washington, representative of the Province of Washington on the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Falls Church Fete

Highlights of the program, sponsored by the school's Varsity Club, will be the football game between Falls Church and Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. The alumni reception will be held in the school's "multi-purpose" room between the halves of the contest.

Two Killed As Flames Hit Forests

Goose Rocks Beach, Me., Oct. 22 (AP).—New or rekindled forest fires today spread destruction through woodlands of the northeastern States, where already two lives have been lost and three million dollars in property loss suffered in rich New England vacation territory.

An end to a prolonged drought was not even predicted and danger mounted rather than abated.

Maine led the fire casualty areas with gale winds driving 40 scattered fires, the worst in this village, near the Kennebunkport summer artists colony, where flames destroyed more than 200 buildings.

New fires were reported today in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and New England, was plagued with sudden new blazes.

Reports of looting and arson came from some sectors where firefighters battled fatigue and the flames.

At Goose Rocks Beach, a wind shift heightened the threat to Kennebunkport, a village of 2000, after fire had swept a five-mile stretch of coastline. New fires broke out today at Bar Harbor and in the Waterboro area.

Maine Fire Commissioner Raymond E. Rendall set total loss thus far at $2,500,000 and in Massachusetts damage was estimated by officials at $500,000.

One man died in the Maine fire zone and another died battling a grass fire in Nsugatuck, Conn.

At Harriman, N. Y., a 7-mile fire front sent smoke over the Hudson River Valley to the edge of New York City and was turned away from the 27,000-acre estate of Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman.

New Jersey reported at least 20 fires. The State Conservation Commission ordered cancellation of all outstanding out-of-doors fire permits.

Ration-Book Printing Urged As Anti-Inflation Insurance

By J. A. Livingston

TWO UNEXPECTED recruits have joined the list of advocates of price and rationing control. They are James P. Warburg, financier, economist and director of numerous companies, and Wendell Berge, former United States Assistant Attorney General. Neither can be regarded as a professional regimenter.

Livingston

The list is bound to increase with prices. Conceivably during the next three to six months, pressure for rationing or price ceilings may command a majority in the United States. I doubt it. I don't think we're going to get the kind of galloping inflation and social unrest that will make most people prefer control to the free market. But that's not the point. We may have to face that prospect. Therefore we ought to be prepared for it.

Imagine this plight. Prices keep pushing up. Appeals to Congress and the President for action become irresistible. Congress and the President decide legislation is necessary. They decide to reimpose controls. And then somebody says: "But we can't. We can't be ready to ration for three months. We don't have ration books." What frustration! The people are ready for regulation in self-defense; yet we haven't the machinery to control ourselves.

WE OUGHT to take out an insurance policy here and now against such a contingency. We can finance it ourselves. We don't need Lloyds. The last ration-book job undertaken by the Government Printing Office cost $4000 per million. That was an 8-page book, containing 96 stamps. The price included printing, special anticounterfeit paper, cover stock, and guarding. This last covers the hiring of guards to see that no stamps or books disappear during printing.

Paper and printing costs are up since that job. "Add about 30 per cent," suggests an official at GPO. That would mean $5200 a million, or $780,000 for a complete job of 150 million books. That's not a big price to pay for readiness. The money could be found in one of the Government departments—in Commerce, say, or the President's own unallocated fund.

Of course, there'd be criticism if the books were never used. You can hear the loud jeers in Congress and the campaign speeches next year. But that's a risk a forehanded, forthright President can afford to run. Indeed, it can be turned into political capital. Vote for the man who knows when to take out insurance.

Three are other risks, too. The very thought of rationing sends people to the stores to stock up. When voluntary food conservation was put in, housewives rushed grocers' flour stocks. Millers, biscuit makers, and bakers have likewise built up inventories against scarcity.

o+o

DISTILLERS, too, have been working their plants overtime to "beat" the October 25 shutdown. When the President and Charles Luckman first considered a whisky shutdown early this month, distillers were operating at about one-third capacity. Now they're up to 100 per cent. They're mashing 300,000 bushels of grain a day, against 100,000 in August. Controls always stimulate hoarding—in anticipation of (1) greater scarcity and (2) profits through price advances.

The mere plan to print ration books might cause a flurry of buying—a bulge in prices. That's a chance the President would have to take. However, the risks of hoarding are often exaggerated. Hoarded food doesn't disappear. Eventually, people eat it. And then current buying in the market drops, price pressures diminish.

The President could make his purpose clear. He could point out that preparation was not contemplation, that he didn't plan to recommend rationing, but merely to be ready for it if the people wanted it. Finally, he could point out the lengthy legislative process. Congress would have to hold hearings and pass a law. Then he's have to sign it.

The very act of printing ration books may reduce the prospect of having to use them. People will become aware that the President means business: That if compelled to, he will be ready to control foods, to spread the supply equitably. Today many people remonstrate:

"There really can't be a food crisis. If there were, the President would call a special session."

People judge other people, including Presidents, by their behavior. If a person takes his own problems seriously and acts accordingly, people will take his problems seriously. This doesn't mean that Harry Truman should put on an act. But it does mean that he ought to suit his actions to his words and vice versa.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 22 (AP).—Reports of a dust storm in Kansas and sharply increased Government export flour purchases caused a late buying movement in wheat on the Board of Trade today. A new 30-year high was made by the December contract at $2.11⅝.

Earlier, wheat had dropped a few cents on moderate profit-taking and a lack of commercial demand. When the dust storm report came in, prices quickly reversed themselves. Oats also moved ahead of the previous close but corn lagged behind other grains.

Wheat closed ¼ to 3 higher, December $2.11⅝@2.11⅞; corn was ⅛ to 1¼ lower, December 2.32⅛@2.32⅜; oats were ⅛ to ⅜ higher, December 1.23¼@1.23½, and soybeans were 1⅞ to 5¾ lower, November 3.57@3.59.

Shortly before the close the Ultimate Grain Co. received a report from Hutchinson, Kans., that there was a "big" dust storm in that area. After the close, reports from Enid, Okla., and Salina, Kans., said it was windy with "some dust in the air."

Dispatches from flour circles in New York said the Production and Marketing Administration had bought more than one million hundredweights of flour in the past two days. It was understood the agency had accepted all flour offered for October shipment, but had not accepted all offered for November shipment.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Cotton futures were firm today with gains of $1.30 to $2.60 a bale, as a late wave of trade buying met a scarcity of offerings.

Traders had been looking for a reaction because covering operations in futures against the recent Government cotton purchases have been largely completed. When this failed to materialize, mills rushed to cover contracts against textile sales.

Light hedging, despite heavy sales of spot cotton at primary markets, and optimistic predictions on textile sale prospects next year by industry leaders, accounted for commission house buying.

Issues Avoided

Judge Halts Woman's Club Legal Battle

Witnesses testifying in the District Court battle over who are the legal officers of the National Woman's Party were called on again yesterday to confine testimony to the issues involved.

Associate Justice James Proctor halted cross-examination of a witness on the validity of credentials of delegates to the disputed convention held at the Mayflower last January on the grounds the testimony was beside the issue.

He also halted examination of a parliamentarian on the legality of the party's constitution and by-laws by stating that he was the one to decide if they were legal. The hearing was continued to next Monday.

One faction in the case is a group of officers, headed by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, who had been elected at the Mayflower meeting allegedly before the expiration date of officers of the other faction's group of officers, headed by Miss Anita Pollitzer.

Court Releases Marine Charged With Rape

A 21-year-old Marine, charged with rape of a Charlotte, N. C., woman, was released yesterday in the custody of his commanding officer because his alleged victim changed her mind and refused to prosecute.

The Marine, S/Sergt. Robert W. DesJardines, was arrested by United States Park Police early last Saturday after the woman told police he had raped her in a parked car after a drinking bout.

At a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Stanley King in Alexandria yesterday, the woman said she did not care to press the charge.

George VI Unveils Statue of Father

London, Oct. 22.—On a small plot at the back of Westminister Abbey facing the parliament buildings, King George VI today unveiled a statue of his father, George V. Britain's monarch from 1910 until his death in 1936.

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

SOMETHING NEW was added to the Redskins' practice routine yesterday at Griffith Stadium, and the casual observer might have viewed it as a football coach gone daft. Turk Edwards had his Redskin backs standing in a gauntlet line, each hugging a ball, with his linemen racing through the array trying to grab off any or all of the footballs.

Thievery violates none of football's commandments, so Edwards set himself up as a modern Fagin. He was holding class in the pro league's fine art of stealing the ball. The Redskins have a new appreciation of ball-stealing since their losing experience against the Packers.

It's an old Packer trick, and the Chicago Bears who move into town on Sunday are not above it either, Edwards knows. Last week at Milwaukee, Bob Nussbaumer made a nice gain all the way to the Packers' 17-yard line, but Bob Forte of Green Bay made a nice tackle—of the ball—and ended up with possession of it.

Pro league officials no longer frown on ball-filching. It's as much a part of the game these days as fumbling. Technically, no ball is ever stolen, it's "fumbled," but don't you believe it.

IT COMES UP Sammy Baugh vs. Sid Luckman again on Sunday, and Redskin fans never did consider Luckman in the same league with Baugh as a forward passer, even in the years when the Bears' pitching ace topped Sammy in the records.

They're running pretty even this season, with Baugh having thrown 10 touchdown passes and Luckman eight. Luckman's percentage of completions is .56 to Baugh's .55, but though both of 'em are great performers their individual skills are hardly comparative. Luckman specializes in the long pass, and he might rate better than Baugh in that respect. But Luckman nor anybody else can throw the short ones with Sammy.

Griffith Stadium isn't one of Luckman's best parks, however. Except for the field day he had in the memorable (or was it deplorable?) 73-0 game in 1940, he has never had much success passing against the Redskins in Washington. Usually, he has been more concerned with getting Redskins off his neck than getting the ball away.

THE BEARS aren't having one of their good years. You can always say that about the Bears when they win only two of their first four starts. They're running fourth in the Western Division. Both the Packers and the Chicago Cardinals knocked 'em off, and the only Western team they licked was the Detroit Lions.

That it wasn't going to be one of the Bears' best years was apparent last August when they were slapped down by the College All-Stars in Chicago. Maybe the night was too hot, but it could be said also that the Bears were too old and too tired. George Halas apparently has whipped his old reliables, Luckman, George McAfee and Bill Osmanski into better shape, but they haven't come up with any brilliant new faces.

In the tougher Western Division, the Bears have been doing as well, statistically, as the Redskins in the weaker Eastern group. In four games they've scored 100 points to the Redskins' 107. They've held the opposition to 91 points, with the Redskins permitting 118. They've made 74 first downs to the Redskins' 71. Both teams have allowed their opposition to complete 50 per cent of their passes.

THIS BUREAU booted one the other day with its report that George Simler, Maryland end, flatly refused to play tackle when Coach Jim Tatum sought to make the change. The story was true except for the twin facts that Simler didn't refuse and Tatum never asked him to make the change.

"I had thought about such a change," said Tatum, "but I never tried to put it into effect. It is true that Simler is 25 years old and a major in the Regular Army, who could be choosy about the position he played, if he liked. But he's a great team man."

Simler has special classes in Army subjects in addition to his regular curriculum, Tatum pointed out. "He's so busy with his studies, he can't attend our regular blackboard drills. I assign one of our coaches to hold special football classes for him, when he can find the time."

Tatum paid Simler another compliment. "There was an athletic scholarship for Simler if he wanted it. He turned it down, saying we could make it available to another student. That was nice of him."

No Tickets Available for 'Skin-Bear Tilt Sunday

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Every seat for Sunday's tussle between the Redskins and Chicago Bears at Griffith Stadium was declared sold yesterday.

Thus fans proved they can smell a good scrap brewing and honored the two best teams in the National Football League down the years. Since coming to Washington in 1937 the Redskins have won five Eastern Division titles and two world championships, and the Bears, defending champions, have taken four world titles and six Western Division crowns.

With identical records of two victories in four games, both clubs are trailing in their sections, the Bears boolding fourth place while the Redskins are tied for second. But followers of the teams know anything can happen between rivals which have featured such series as that of 1940, when Washington won a regular-season 7-3 game and lost the championship playoff, 73-0.

Chicago, boasting a 28-7 preseason triumph over the unworried Redskins, has another advantage according to the statistics.

The Bears have averaged more yards gained per game than any other team in the league. They have gained 1510 yards in four games. The passes of Sid Luckman have accounted for 999 of these yards.

Baugh Leads League

Only Detroit and Pittsburgh, which have played one more game than the Bears, have gained more yards than the Chicagoans.

Washington's passing, handled by Sammy Baugh, is still its best offense. The Redskins have the league's top percentage of completion, 54.9 with 67 good tosses in 122 tries. And Baugh's yardage gain beats Luckman's in the same number of games by 97 yards.

The Redskins are leading the league in two more statiscal departments, and are tied for the lead in three others.

They lead in average yardage per kickof return with 28.7 yards, and in touchdowns scored by passes with 10.

They are tied for league leadership with 23 kickoff returns, most fumbles, 13 and most fumbles recovered 6.

Jim Crowley Firing Denied By Rockets

Chicago, Oct. 22 (AP).—William Toohey, president of the Chicago Rockets of the All-America Football Conference, today denied published reports that Jim Crowley would be replaced as head coach of the Rockets by Hampton Pool, former end for the Chicago Bears of the National Football League.

"I don't know where that story started," Toohey said. "There is absolutely no foundation for it. Crowley is still our coach and he will continue to direct the team as long as he wants to as far as I'm concerned."

Crowley was in charge of the Rockets today as the squad worked out at Soldier Field in preparation for their game against the New York Yankees here Friday.

Pool has acted as one of Crowley's assistants this year, along with Al Barbarisky, also a former Bear player.

The Rockets have lost eight straight All-America Conference games.

Hoya Tom Graham Promises Score For Ill Namesake

Tom Graham, Georgetown fullback, goes into the New York University game Friday night with a one-touchdown handicap.

Tom has promised to score one for 9-year-old Jimmy Graham, who is now in the Shrine Hospital in Springfield, Mass., recovering from an operation for infantile paralysis.

Jimmy is not a relative of Tom, but read about the latter's successful boyhood fight against rheumatic fever. The youngster wrote to Georgetown asking for an autographed picture of Graham.

Tom phoned Jimmy in Springfield and promised not only a picture but a touchdown.

Later, when it was discovered that Jimmy will celebrate his tenth birthday on October 31, Jimmy was promised a sideline seat at the Hoya-Boston College game if his condition permitted.

Larue to Start In Gambino's Spot

College Park, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—Coach Jim Tatum announced today Jimmy Larue, shifty Maryland halfback, would start against VPI Saturday in place of Lou Gambino, who leads the Southern Conference in scoring with 48 points.

Maryland officials said simply that Larue, a junior from Clinton, Okla., has earned a starting berth, but added quickly Gambino was sure to see plenty of action in the Virginia Poly game.

Larue, who played a season for Duke, is a typical "scat-back," who gains as much ground by footwork as by speed.

Landon Wins, 13-0

Landon defeated Sidwell Friends, 13-0, yesterday in a 120-pound class football game at Landon. Dick Barnett raced 40 yards for one touchdown and passed 30 yards to Ken Murphy for the other. Bob Schuh dropkicked the extra point.

Surman Is Soph Punting Ace Who Keeps Hoyas Out of Hole

By William Klemm—The Washington Post
GEORGETOWN'S LOU SURMAN ABOUT TO PUT HIS BEST FOOT FORWARD

Lou Averages 44 Yards a Boot; Tatum Worried About VPI Game

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IN LOU SURMAN, Coach Jack Hagerty has an ace who keeps Georgetown out of the hole.

Surman is a sophomore halfback who gets a big kick out of football. In fact, he gets such a big kick that his punting average for four games this year is a wee bit better than 42 yards per try.

Last year, the 29-year-old Hoya from Peabody, Mass., was the Nation's ninth best punter, averaging 44 yards per boot. He really didn't put his best foot forward this season until last Saturday against Tulsa, when he averaged 47 yards per ty.

One of his kicks went 72 yards, another 65 and a third just a trfling 54 yards. No kicks about that kind of kicking.

Surman, who displaces 185 pounds on a 5-foot 10-inch frame, was an All-State end at Peabody, Mass., High School. Hagerty switched him to the backfield when he enrolled on the Hilltop and used him as his regular punter last year.

Lou can run, too, and has a splendid 12.2 yard per average try this season. He's only carried the ball eight times, however. He alternates with Tom Graham and Lou Miller in the Hoya backfield and has started two of GU's four games.

He may not be in there Friday evening at Griffith Stadium at the start when the Hoyas meet NYU in a homecoming brush, but just wait for the Hoyas to get into a rough spot and you'll see Mr. Surman swing into action—with his foot.

GRIDIRON GRIST—The fellow who tagged Jim Tatum "Sunny Jim" would have considerable trouble recognizing Tatum at College Park this week. "Gloomy Jim" is probably a better name for him at this point . . . Tatum is worried about Saturday's Terp-VPI game in Blacksburg, Va. Feels his squad has suffered a tremendous letdown after the Duke game . . . Called the squad "listless and tired" at a special meeting yesterday, but is still hopeful that they'll snap out of it in time for the Gobbler game . . . Halfback Hubie Werner, banged up in the Richmond game, still doubtful . . .

Series Is All Even

VPI has never lost a homecoming game and will go all out to preserve that a record against Tatum's Terps. The 24-game series between the schools is all even, 12 victories apiece . . . If the Terps win, they will have bettered their 1946 record this early with four victories. Last year's club won only three all season . . .

George Washington entrained for Florida and its Friday night game against Miami last night . . . Arrive this afternoon at 5 in Coral Gables and will immediately hustle through a light, nocturnal workout . . . Coach Skip Stahley feels his Colonials have an outside chance to dump the Miamians of they play the way they did in the first half against Wake Forest Saturday . . . Coach Jack Harding, of the Miamians, is having his roughest season. His Stingarees have won only one game and Harding blames South Florida's unprecedented rainy season for it . . . Says his team hasn't been able to run itself into condition . . . Stahley hopes they won't run too much against G. W.

Dick Scott Heads Navy Senior Class

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—Midshipman Richard U. Scott, captain of the Navy football team, has been elected president of the Naval Academy first class—the seniors, it was announced today.

Ralph (Pete) Williams, halfback on the Middie eleven until a fractured ankle put him out of play, is president of the second class.

College Twin Bills at Armory Hinge on New 8200-Seat Plan

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Use of the National Guard Armory for college basketball doubleheaders became contingent yesterday on acceptance by the District Commissioners of a new plan to increase the seating capacity from 4800 to 8200.

Athletic Directors Rome Schwagel of Georgetown and Max Farrington of George Washington, who drew up the plan, told Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, "landlord" of the armory, yesterday that if it were not accepted, their schools would have to abandon their doubleheader plans.

Earlier, the schools had drawn up a schedule of seven doubleheaders they would play at the armory when it was estimated that the armory could seat 12,000 to 15,000 comfortably.

But an inspection by the District Commissioners and fire department officials resulted in the decision that the armory would be able to seat only 4800 and still be free from fire hazard.

According to General Cox, the new plan, accommodating 5800 around the court and 2400 in the gallery, has a good chance of being accepted.

Cox said that the plan would be presented to the commissioners today or tomorrow and that he would probably receive a decision early next week.

Schwagel and Farrington told Cox yesterday that if the new plan were not accepted, G. W. and Georgetown would have to alter their schedules so that instead of the doubleheaders, they would play single games on different nights at the armory.

They explained that 4800 seating capacity was not large enough to take care of the turnouts expected for the twin bills.

Mrs. Glick's 159 Maintains Lead In Payne Golf

Pikesville, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—Mrs. Maurice Glick, women's Middle Atlantic golf champion, who led yesterday by two strokes, went three strokes ahead of the field today in the second round of the 54-hole Payne trophy medal play tournament at the Woodholme Country Club.

Mrs. Glick shot a four-over par 79 today to bring her two-day total to 159.

Mrs. Walter Stokes, defending titlist from the Manor Club, Washington, equalled Mrs. Glick's 79 for a second place total of 162, while Mrs. Jerome Sloman of Suburban Club shot an 82 to bring her total to 168.

Mrs. L. G. Pray of Columbia, who had held the runnerup post at the end of the first round with an 82, slipped to an 86 today and placed her in a tie for fourth with Jeanette Myers of Suburban Club, Baltimore, whose 83—87 gave her a two-day total of 169.

Mrs. Glick's 151, on the basis of low net, places her well in front of the field in this division, in which a special prize will be awarded. Runnersup with 156's are Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Edmund Novak of the Baltimore Country Club. Mrs. Novak's gross is 188.

V.M.I.'s Crowson Named Top Frosh

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 22 (AP).—A Plebe halfback at Virginia Military Institute, George Crowson, is this week's Associated Press nomination for Southern Conference football's "freshman of the week."

Crowson paced a last-half rally by the Flying Squadron which finally bowed to a top-favored Richmond University eleven, 21-20.

The New Iberia (Ill.) youth accounted for a brace of touchdowns. Joe Ventri tossed him a pass in the third quarter which Crowson took in on the Richmond 30, and ran over for the initial score of the corps. In the fourth, Crowson received a kickoff on his own 13, and raced 87 yards for a touchdown.

Woodcock Begins Comeback Nov. 17

London, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—Promoter Jack Solomons said today that Bruce Woodcock, British heavyweight champion, will make his first ring appearance since last April at Harringway Arena, November 17, against an opponent to be named in a few weeks.

In his last flight, Woodcock suffered a broken jaw as he was knocked out by Joe Baksi, Kulpmont, Pa., heavyweight.

Penn May Switch to T-Formation Against Navy

Philadelphia, Oct. 22 (AP).—Pennsylvania's football team, which hasn't found a tough foe all year, will "have to open up its bag of tricks" against Navy Saturday, Coach George Munger said today with his usual worried look.

"When you play Navy Day at Franklin Field, Munger said, "you've got wourself a football game. I believe Navy has as good a team as ours. Don't let the records fool you."

The records: Penn has drubbed Lafayette, Dartmouth and Columbia; Navy lost to California and Columbia, tied Duke and erupted against Cornell last week with a convincing 38-19 triumph.

That was Navy's first victory since a 7-0 decision over Villanova to open the 1046 season.

Navy always plays well on Franklin Field and last year, although beaten 32-19, outplayed the Red and Blue in the second half. Penn's team is virtually the same as that which faced Navy a year ago.

Munger advocate of the single wing attacks, indicated he may come up with a T-attack against Navy. A year ago, Munger unwrapped Penn's T against the Middies and surged to two early scores, thereafter reverting to the single wing.

Much of Penn's fortunes ride on Charles Bednarik, the brilliant 220-pound center. Bednarik suffered a chest injury against Columbia a week ago and thereafter Penn's defense was vulnerable to the Lion's thrusts.

At the moment it is doubtful if Bednarik will be able to play. The Bethlehem, Pa., pivotman said today "the slightest exertion affects my breathing, and unless this thing gets better quickly, I'm afraid I'll have to sit this game out."

The Red and Blue has two top-flight running backs in Skippy Minisi and Bob Deuber and a round half-dozen capable passers including Minisi, Deuber, Bob Evans, Carmen Falcone, Walt Krichling and Al Sica.

Against this outfit, Coach Tom Hamilton of Navy is counting on a big, tough line and the backfield power in Bill Hawkins' legs and Reaves Baysinger's passing arm.

The Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., is cutting loose with all the traditional Middie spirit for this one. "We're on the way," says one sign. Others read: "Let's keep winning," and "Let's beat Penn."

"We're ready for them physically," Hamilton said cautiously. "What we do on the field is another matter."

Middies Stress Defensive Drills

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—Navy coaches are concentrating this week on testimony their agents have given about the mighty offensive of a Penn eleven that in three games has raked in 125 points.

Intensive drills every afternoon are stressing defense for the Middie forwards and secondary operators. At Franklin Field this Saturday they expect to deal with a Pnn attack mor ferocious than any encountered in Navy's four games to date.

Neither Coach Tom Hamilton nor E. E. (Rip) Miller, his line mentor, betray any lack of confidence in their forwards. Led by Capt. Dick Scott, the skillful center and the Navy line is experienced, powerful and has shown well all season.

Hamilton was lavish in praise of Dick Shimshak, 208-pound tackle, today.

"He's played a bang-up game for us all season," Hamilton said. "And so has Myron Gerber, who has been going in regularly as defensive fullback. Those fellows have been doing a real job.

Rocky, Cerdan Bout Proposed for Paris

New York, Oct. 22 (INS).—Paris now is being proposed as the site of a middleweight championship meeting between Marcel Cerdan and Rocky Grazinano.

The fight, provided arrangements can be made to get Grazinano out of the country, would be put on in the spring with Joe Longman as the promoter.

War Dept. Worker Wins Grid Contest

WILLIAM M. KAISER, War Department employe of 3607 Georgia ave. nw., proved the best of 27,650 entries in The Washington Post's second weekly Pick-The-Winners football contest.

Four tickets to the Washington Redskins-Chicago Bears game at Griffith Stadium Sunday, plus a pair of tickets to the Army-Navy contest in Philadelphia November 20 with all expenses paid went to 30-year-old former Wilson Teachers College student who missed only one game in 20 selections.

WILLIAM KAISER

Kaiser was on of 22 entries who missed a single game, most of them the 13-13 tie between Kansas and Oklahoma. On the probable score clincher, however, Kaiser was the eventual winner with a guess of 32-0 favoring Notre Dame in the Nebraska game. The actual score was 31-0.

KAISER, a recent bridegroom, attributed his victory to careful study of past performances, injuries and team spirit. He has entered contests for years, he said, although this is his first triumph in football selection. He once won a baseball contest, however.

Closest to Kaiser in the final tally were three entries who also missed the Kansas-Oklahoma tie and predicted Nebraska would go scoreless against the Irish.

R. Wescott of 1010 20th st. nw., figured Notre Dame would score 36 points; Harold H. Woolridge, jr., of 1413 Massachusetts ave. nw., thought Notre Dame would run up 38 points, and W. D. Musser of Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, had the Irish down for 44 points.

INCREASED interest in The Washington Post's contest was indicated that last week's total entries exceeded the first week's by 7650.

Kaiser's record of a single error was also an improvement over the initial week in which Ralph I. Miller and Charles M. Gott shared the spoils, each with two games wrong.

Elsewhere on this page the third weekly contest blank is printed for the last time this morning. Tear yours out and get it in as soon as possible!

Don't Forget Names

Don't forget to put your name on your entry in The Washington Post's weekly grid contest!

This warning has been stressed by checkers who find many slips, well up in the running, with all identification ommitted.

Remember, your best selection go for naught if we don't know who made 'em. Read the rules carefully and follow them exactly.

Stribling May Meet Bee Bee

A twin incentive was offered to Ken Stribling to defeat Johnny Walker, Philadelphia middleweight, Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Not only will Ken seek to extend his undefeated streak, but a Walker triuph will put him in line for a shot with Bee-Bee Washington. This new development was revealed yesterday by matchmaker Gabe Menendez, who offered Washington a $1500 guarantee to box Stribling, providing Ken gets by Walker.

Bill Bennings

At Laurel.

DEAR FOLKS:

Hemlock, 3-year-old gray gelding by Sun Beau and Saturday Off, who raced in Tuesday's steeplechase, died late in the afternoon of injuries received when he crashed into the wing of one of the jumps. Hemlock suffered a deep gash in his chest when he struck the wing. The gelding was owned by Mrs. Corliss Sullivan and was trained by Rigan McKinney. Steeplechase Jockey C. H. Williams, who was astride Hemlock, suffered only a severe shaking up and a bruised hip. It was at first feared he might have suffered a leg fracture but Dr. Robert S. McCeney, track physician today reported that the X-rays showed no break. The handle of $991,064 sent the total wagering for 18 days to $16,154,966 as against $15,080,089 for the same period last season. This is an increase of $1,074,877 or exactly 7 per cent. Pimlico's Special, top race of the fall meeting each year, draws thoroughbred followers from all sections of the country. Among the letters on the Special received here was one from Miss Eunice Arnim of San Antonio, Tex., asking for the complete schedule of Pimlico's fall meeting, including the date of the Special, which she says she must not miss. Miss Arnim has only a week for the sport and plans to fly in for the races. BILL.

Big If Leads Big Dial for 2d by Nose

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 22.—A thrilling photo finish and a foul claim made the 1947 running of the Spalding Lowe Jenkins, today's $10,000 feature, an excitable race for a crowd of 12,000.

The negative showed the Bomar Stable's Piet the winner by a scant nose with Mrs. John T. Maloney's Big If second by inches over G. M. Jacobson's Big Dial.

The trio went into the wire as if pulling a chariot.

The objection was lodged by Jockey Doug Dodson, who rode Big Dial, against Jockey Red Howell who piloted Piet. Dodson claimed Piet bore out in the stretch and as a result his mount was unable to keep a straight course.

Closest Finish to Date

The stewards listened to both sides and consulted the patrol judges before making the original finish "official."

Not in the history of the race, first contested in 1928, has there been a finish to compare with today's thriller. The three photo horses were all-out as were their riders at the end of the mile and a sixteenth.

Piet, a 2-year-old son of Grand Slam, was clocked in 1:46 2/5, the best time for the race since Alsab's victory of 1941 and paid a $6.60 mutuel as second choice to Dr. Almac.

Piet continued to be a lucky colt for in his previous race he was awarded victory over Dr. Almac through a foul claim. Today, Piet survived an objection.

Big If and Dr. Almac fought along head and head for the lead in the early running. However, Piet was well placed and on the outside while Dodson was rating Big Dial.

Third for Piet at Laurel

Piet then moved up to join Dr. Almac and Big If as the trio approached the stretch. Dr. Almac dropped out of it and then Big Dial came with a rush to reach contention.

Piet and Big If were fighting it out in the stretch when Big Dial made his final bid. Piet appeared to swerve momentarily and Dodson had to pull off Big Dial but he was anybody's race going into the wire.

The victory was the third in a row for Piet here—one through disqualification. The triumph brought $8940 in earnings to the Bomar Stable owned by C. B. Bohn of Detroit. Piet now has $92,110 in earnings for the year and stamps him as a threat for the 1948 classics of the 3-year-olds division.

Top Jumpers In Ogle 'Chase Today

Laurel, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—The Nation's top jumpers, with one or two exceptions, are included in the field of nine horses named for tomorrow's seventeenth running of the Governor Ogle Steeplechase Handicap.

Kent Miller has an entry which includes the two top weights of the field—War Battle under 164 pounds and Elkridge at 158—and appears to hold a strong hand in the $10,000-added event run at two miles over 13 fences.

Arrayed against the Miller jumpers will be Miss Ella Widener's entry of Adaptable, 150, and Chance Bullet, 137; T. T. Mott's Floating Isle, 148; Rokeby Stable's Genancoke, 141; Mrs. C. E. Adams' Refugio, 139; R. W. Grant's Sun Bath, 139, and Brookemeade Stable's Greek Flag, 137.

Their records indicate the class of the field, with War Battle victor in the Meadow Brook and Hitchcock and Elkridge winner of the Lion Heart and Glendale. Elkridge won the Ogle in 1942.

Floating Isle, hardest campaigner of the group, took the Appleton, Beverwyck, Saratoga and Harbor Hill in 19 starts and finished in the money in seven other steeplechase stakes.

Fresh from victory in the Grand National after an earlier score in the Brook is Adaptable, while Genancoke captured the Georgetown. Greek Flag won the Cherry Malotte, and Chance Bullet the Delaware spring maiden.

Refugio has failed to win in this country after competing in the Grand National at Aintree, England, while Sun Bath was second in the recent Butler Handicap here.

Sheehan of Jersey City succeeds Ryan, who announced he will manage the Tanforan Track in California for its new owners, Eugene Mori and William Helis.

SYPHON, going evenly while well placed early, drifted out entering stretch, then came on with good speed when straightened away. AYLESBURY moved to the front at once, held on determinedly and just failed to last. MARYKNOLL, far back early, closed strongly. ABOKO broke a trifle slow, was rushed up on the outside, became serious threat nearing top of stretch then lost all chance by bearing out badly. POOCHANELLI lacked early speed and closed a cap.

FIFTY-FIFTY, fencing well and in plenary handling, took short lead after turn of field, shook off KENNERUNK, withstood challenges from LITTLE SAMMIE and was ridden out fresh last fences. LITTLE SAMMIE, in hand while well placed early, was forced wide by KENNERUNK last time entering lower turn, lost ground while being outjumped by KENNERUNK. KENNERUNK displayed good early speed thereafter. FIELDPARE was outrun. BAR SHIP failed to better position. HIGH PRICE, away poorly, bobbled at first jump and lost rider at second.

ARIEL SONG, rated to top of stretch, came on with good speed through last sixteenth of mile. L'HEURE went evenly and had no excuse. FLUCKY MAID had good early speed, tired in closing part. DAINGER GIRL never a factor.

BIG IF, away quickly and taken back for run around lower turn, moved to serious contention while saving ground entering home lane and just failed to get up. BIG DIAL, badly impeded by GRAND ISLE and knocked back entering lower turn, closed fast in stretch. Jockey Dodson claimed foul against the winner, but it was not allowed. DR. ALMAC set early pace and tired. FINAL TOUCH was outrun.

...ions Play Tonight at New Haven

A new line that will introduce twin brothers will be featured by the Washington Lions tonight when they inaugurate a schedule of three American Hockey League matches in as many nights against the New Haven Ramblers in New Haven, Conn.

The local stars return to Uline Ice against Paul Courteau and the Springfield Indians tomorrow night at 8:30, and entrain to Springfield, Mass., immediately afterward to oppose the Indians Saturday.

Dan Porteous, who represented the Valleyfield Braves in the Quebec Senior Hockey Group last season, will center the line that will find Frank Porteous on right wing and Win Mousseau at left. Mousseau and Frank Porteous, who formerly skated with Omaha of the United States League, have recovered sufficiently from recent injuries to see action.

Three former local favorites will be in the Springfield Indians lineup when they invade local ice tomorrow night. Courteous, a center and winger, and Keith Allen, a smooth defenseman, were popular with the old Washington Eagles here several years ago. Don Webster, a rugged defenseman, skated with the 1945-46 Eastern League Lions.

Southwest Plays Riverside Sunday

Leadership of the Metropolitan Football League's 180-pound Western Division will be at stake Sunday when the Southwest Merchants, current pacesetters, and Riverside Rollers, close behind in second place, clash in a 2 p. m. game at the Hoover Playground.

Riverside slipped to second place behind the Southwest club last Sunday when the Rollers suffered their first defeat, an 0-6 loss to the Southeast A. C., while the Merchants were defeating the Maryland Mohawks, 13-6.

Attendance Up 6½ Pct. for College Games

New York, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—A United Press survey of 64 leading colleges throughout the Nation revealed today that attendance at home football games to date has increased 6.5 per cent above the record shattering pace of 1946.

At the midseason mark of the 1947 campaign, the 64 colleges have played before 4,432,317 fans at their home games compared to 4,158,955 which the same schools attracted for the same number of contests at the half-way mark of the 1946 season, the survey showed.

All section of the country except the Midwest showed an increase with the Southwestern sector enjoying the biggest percentage boost of 18 per cent. New England was second with a 16 per cent increase, followed by the South with 13.4 per cent, the Rocky Mountain area with 11 per cent, the East with 9, the Midlands 6 and the far West 1 per cent. The Midwest showed a decrease of 1.5 per cent.

Only 17 of the 64 colleges reported decreases, 5 of them in the Midwest—Ohio State, Michigan, Illinois, Purdue and Wisconsin. The others whose attendance was down from last year were North Carolina State, Tulane, Tennessee and Mississippi, in the South; Washington, Stanford and Southern California in the Far West; Southern Methodist, which plays its 1947 games in a smaller stadium, in the Southwest; Nebraska and St. Louis University in the Midlands; Pennsylvania in the East and Holy Cross in New England.

Three colleges — Villanova, Baylor and Georgia—reported the same attendance figures for this year as they did in 1946.

2 Cards Miss Hopkins Game

Injuries to two regulars in last week's Randolph-Macon game have Catholic University Grid Coach Gene Augusterfer discounting reports of any easy time for the Cards against Johns Hopkins in Baltimore Saturday.

Quarterback Mike Smith and Tackle Al Fulner will both miss the Hopkins' clash because of rib injuries. Reserve Halfback Bucky Ennis will replace Smith and 195-pound Bob Mulvey will shift from end to tackle to replace Fulner.

At Lexington

Aerial Circus Looms in Grid Twin Bill

Richmond, Va., Oct. 22 (AP).—Six of the top passers in the State and one of the best in the Nation will be performing on Wilson Field in Lexington this Saturday during the homecoming doubleheader of Washington and Lee and Virginia Military Institute.

The half dozen chuckers of W. and L., VMI, and Virginia will be headed by red-headed Dick Working, the Baltimore, Md., lad, who has completed 36 of 64 tosses for W. and L. to rank sixth in the Nation.

Right behind Working come such above-average passers as Bobby Thomason, and Joe Veltri of VMI, Bruce Bailey and Joe McCary of Virginia, and Mike Boyda, who shares quarterbacking duties for the Generals with Working.

Davidson, Washington and Lee's foe for the first or morning Tussle, has been operating largely on the ground this season, working from Coach Bill Story's single wing. The Wildcats, however, have had a reputation for a wide-open game in the past and may also put in more than a fair share in the way of an aerial barrage.

Veltri Surprise Star

Joe Veltri, started out as an under study to VMI's Thomason when that worthy, who ranked among the best in the country last year, was injured. After his exhibition in the George Washington game and the pass he fired to George Crowson for a 67-yard touchdown play against Richmond, the New Kensington, Pa., sophomore may turn in a show that surpasses previous exhibitions by Thomason.

Virginia hasn't had to depend on passing too much this season since their ground game has netted nearly a mile of yardage in four games, but should Coach Art Guepe decide to go through the air for touchdowns, McCary and Bailey are more than qualified to carry the load.

Although the doubleheader in Lexington holds the center of the State's gridiron stage, the rest of the Old Dominion teams are very much in the picture with top-flight games.

VPI Stresses Tackling

Coach Jimmy Kitts, whose Gobblers will make a homecoming stand at Blacksburg against Maryland, is taking pains to correct the poor tackling which he believes hurt Tech chances in the Army game.

"It was the same old fault at West Point—poor tackling," Kitts said, "and Maryland, our scouts have reported, will do some fancy running against us if we don't correct that situation."

Coach Morgan Tiller of Hampden-Sydney sent his first and second teams against each other in a game scrimmage, hoping to prime them to break their winless, scoreless season record against the University of Richmond here Saturday. Bill Gallalee, an end recently shifted to tackle, stood out in the Tiger drills.

William and Mary, getting ready to fly north for a tilt with Boston University, continued to take things relatively easy in a light drill yesterday. Jack Cloud, the Braves' injured fullback, watched the proceedings from the sidelines.

Cardozo Swamps Dunbar, 42-0

The Blue and White Cardozo High eleven triumphed over Dunbar, 42-0, yesterday at Brooks Stadium, before a crowd of 6000.

Sid Parker, with a one-yard crash over the line scored the first touchdown early in the game. Bob Wills made the extra point from placement. Steve Ellerbe added the second, covering seven yards. The third was a 38-yard pass, Lee Miles to Marc Boston, as the half ended.

Bosox Release Shofner, Fine to San Francisco

Boston, Oct. 22 (AP).—Fall house cleaning continued at Fenway Park today as Red Sox General Manager Joe Cronin announced the outright release of righthanded Pitcher Tommy Fine and Infielder Frank (Strick) Shofner to San Francisco of the Pacific Coast League.

The transfer of these two will complete a deal for the Seals' Neill Sheridan, an outfielder.

Yawkey, Cronin Attend Brother Gilbert's Rites

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 22.—They laid Brother Gilbert in his last resting place today—with 10-year-old Frank Haggerty "batting" for Babe Ruth at the services.

It was Brother Gilbert, sports fan remember, who—watching a gangling boy in overalls playing baseball in Baltimore, saw a big league future for George Herman Ruth—who as "Babe Ruth" became a living legend.

The great Babe was too ill to attend the funeral.

Men like President Tom Yawkey and General Manager Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox and President Lou Perini of the Boston Braves.

Payton Critical, Temperature Up

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 22 (AP).—George Payton, professional golfer of Newport News, Va., who has been unconscious since an October 9 automobile accident, was reported in a "very critical" condition at Presbyterian Hospital here today.

Temperature of the 24-year-old Virginia State Open Champion is up and Payton is "somewhat worse," the hospital reported.

Physicians earlier this week said that if Payton recovered sufficiently, his severely-fractured left leg would have to be amputated.

Action Today Expected on Loan Licenses

The District Commissioners are expected to act today on a recommendation that licenses be issued immediately to small-loan companies here.

West

License Superintendent Edward E. Bailey, jr., said he had made the recommendation when forwarding 25 license applications to the Commissioners for action last week.

Bailey said he offered the recommendation on the advice of Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, who ruled the District had no authority to withhold licenses from those who were eligible to receive them.

Police precinct captains recommended that only one applicant be denied a license, although 6 of the 25 had criminal records.

Bailey said Metropolitan Police officials had wanted to hold up all licenses until regulations are drawn up to govern operation of small-loan companies.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert D. Wise and Francis Buckley of the District Bar Association's small-loan committee are currently working with Bailey and other license officials to draft the regulations.

Airlines To Divide N. Y. Traffic

The Air Transport Association announced yesterday a plan for dividing airline traffic in the New York area between LaGuardia and Newark airports as the first step in a Nation-wide program to unsnarl jams at major travel centers.

The New York area plan will go into effect November 1. In general, it provides that most North-South traffic will use LaGuardia airport, and most East-West traffic use Newark.

With this division of activity and a seasonal reduction in airline schedules, LaGuardia's daily volume of airline landings and take-offs will be reduced from 434 to 322, while Newark's will increase from 124 to 176.

The association, which represents all scheduled passenger airlines, said New York was selected because traffic congestion there caused by low visibility weather conditions affects traffic at Chicago, Boston, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Detroit, and at times results in delays at points even farther South and West.

The plan will eliminate shuttle flying between the two airports and will eliminate crossing traffic by North-South and East-West planes over New York. The new traffic pattern reaches out as far as Philadelphia, since that is the point where East-West traffic intending to land at LaGuardia may be required to enter the North-South lane.

Benefit Planned

A rejoin-membership tea will be held by the Washington chapter of the Jewish Junior Consumptive Relief Society at 8:30 tonight at the home of Miss Pauline Cohen, 1375 Underwood st. nw.

6 Relief Plans Proposed as Barney Circle Traffic Aids

Joint Board of PUC, Commisioners Hold 4-Hour Hearing To Discuss Subject

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Plans for remodeling Barney Circle yesterday piled up in a District government hearing like the rush hour traffic jams they were designed to cure.

Six major plans were presented to a special District joint board composed of the city Commissioners and the Public Utilities Commission during a four-hour hearing in the District Building Board Room. They were accompanied by numerous secondary and alternative proposals.

Barney Circle is at the western end of Sousa Bridge. Into it run Pennsylvania ave., Kentucky ave., 17th st., K st. and Water st. se. It is a terminal point for street cars and six Capital Transit bus lines. It is on a main bus route of the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis Motor Lines. Thousands of motorists from Southeast Washington drive around it daily. Rush hour traffic blocks are frequent.

Starting point for yesterday's hearing was the official Barney Circle improvement plan presented by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of highways. It calls for cutting the main Pennsylvania ave.-Sousa Bridge artery straight through the circle, putting underground the streetcar turnaround now inside the circle, and providing side lanes for bus loading along the edge of the main drive. There would be an underground cross walk for pedestrians.

Four Substitute Plans

Capital Transit officials presented four substitute plans, all with the theme of keeping streetcars and buses on the surface. One plan called for an underpass, a second for an overpass, to carry the main flow of automobile traffic along the Pennsylvania ave.—Sousa Bridge route. Captain Whitehurst said the overpass would cost 29 per cent more, and the underpass 91 per cent more, than his plan. He said a three or four-year old estimate of his plan's cost was $900,000, and that the present cost would be much higher.

Of two other transit plans, one was designed to give immediate relief to the traffic problem at Barney Circle. It called for routing traffic away from its present southbound course around the western end of the circle, with much of the plan called for making 17th st. the plan called for making 17th se. a one-way north-bound street; Kentucky ave. and 16th st. would remain two-way but southbound traffic could not use them to reach Barney Circle. The B-2 bus from Mount Rainier and Northeast Washington that now enters the circle on 17th st., would approach it via 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave. The V-6 bus from the Bureau of Engraving that now enters the circle on K st. would approach via Potomac ave and Pennsylvania ave.

New Bus Terminal Proposed

As a final plan, Capital Transit officials proposed modifying their third plan to provide for a new bus terminal just off the circle to the south. The B-2 and V-6 buses would reach it via K st., and leave via Water, L and 15th sts. Captain Whitehurst said this plan would require paving Water st. and new traffic lights at 15th and Pennsylvania ave. In both the third and fourth Capital Transit plans, the four bus lines it operates from Anacostia over the Sousa Bridge to Barney Circle would continue to use the terminal inside the circle.

A sixth major plan was presented by A. D. Calvert of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association. It called for running automobile traffic straight through the circle and providing underground approaches for both buses and street cars to a new transit terminal in the area bounded by K, L, 15th and Water sts.

Capital Transit Spokesmen

Spokesmen for Capital Transit included William B. Bennett, vice president; F. G. Awalt, attorney; Gordon Gravelle, traffic engineer, and John B. Ecker, director of research and planning. Bennett and other officials contended that the Highway Department's plan would still leave the southbound flow of traffic at the western end of Barney. This cross-flow, they said, was a major factor in traffic jams at the circle.

Wallace L. Braun, deputy director of vehicles and traffic for the District, said his office is studying ways to reduce the number of entrances to the circle by making some of the streets one way, but he said such measures would not solve the problem. He said his office indorsed the Highway Department plan or any alternative that would move the transit terminal to another off-street location.

Ecker proposed that if the terminal has to be moved, it should go to the square where Pennsylvania and Potomac aves. and 14th st. se. meet.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said his agency had approved the highway department plan in principle, but suggested that the whole problem be given further study. Irving C. Root, superintendent of the Federal Officer of National Capital Parks, said his agency would cooperate in the improvement of Barney Circle traffic flow.

Whitehurst's plan gathered support from citizens' groups during the afternoon session, but their indorsements generally reserved the right to consider possible improvements in the plan. Among those who testified along this line were Joseph H. Deckman of Randle Highlands Citizens Association and Edward L. Merzereau of the North Randle Community Citizens Association.

P. Y. K. Howat, chairman of the advisory board of the District Motor Club of the American Automobile Association, gave unqualified indorsement to the highway department plan, but said his group would be willing to study alternatives.

William A. Duvall of the Fort Davis Citizens Association, said his group had approved the highway department plan with suggested changes, but he also urged immediate rush hour traffic relief by cutting off the south flow of cross traffic at the circle. Arthur E. Morrissette of the Southeast Business Men's Association, also urged immediate traffic relief.

F. P. Randolph of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, indorsed the plan presented by Calvert, while Henry Austin, president of the same council but speaking for two other organizations, indorsed the highway department plan with modifications. He spoke for the Washington Chapter of the American Association of Engineers, and the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association.

Other witnesses included: Mrs. Edward B. Morris of the Randle Highlands Citizens Associations; Milo H. Brinkley, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, also a supporter of the highway department plan with modifications; William Small of the Citizens Council for Community Planning, Charles A. Barker of 333 M st. se., and L. L. Altmann of the W. M. & A. Motor Lines.

Traffic Bureau Crackdown

9 Held as Misrepresenting To Obtain Driving Permits

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Nine persons have been arrested and the police are looking for the tenth in a drive by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic to stop the practice of obtaining drivers license by misrepresentation.

Six of the violators have been tried in Municipal Court and fined $25 of 30 days. Two have had their cases continued until tomorrow and another case was dismissed.

Herman S. Cole, administrative officer for the motor vehicle bureau has alerted inspectors in the license department to compare signatures of applicants when they take the written examination and road test.

First to be arrested this week were Daniel Martin, 29, 4612 Hayes st. ne., and Tomas Martin, 37, 403 50 st. ne. According to Inspector Thomas E. West, both were charged with misrepresentation when Thomas Martin took the written examination for Daniel.

Judge Nathan T. Margold of Municipal Court fined Thomas $25 or 30 days and turned the case of his brother Daniel over to the probation officer. They were arrested on Monday.

On Tuesday five persons were arrested, and charged with misrepresentation. Clifton Derrington, 36, 5308 James Pl. ne., and Gussie Wilson, 28, of the same address, were placed under arrest by Inspector West. They are scheduled to appear before Judge Nadine Gallagher tomorrow.

Also arrested Tuesday on the same charge were Wilbert Terry, 20, 1109 O st. nw.; Payton Fairfax, 25, 1729 9th st. nw., and Lewis Terry, jr., 21, 1109 O st. nw.

According to Inspector Thomas F. Lewis, Wilbert Terry took the road test for Fairfax. All were sentenced by Judge Nadine Gallagher to $25 fine or 30 days in jail.

Lewis Terry, jr., had two other charges placed against him. Driving on a suspended permit and failing to turn in suspended permit. He was fined a total of $130 on the three charges.

Yesterday Inspector Leo Bernhardt arrested two others and asked the police to look for a third violator. Arrested were Lorenzo Paul Glascoe, 29, 1477 Florida ave. nw., and Robert Williams, 42, 4508 Jay st. ne.

According to Inspector Bernhardt, Glascoe took the road test for a private in the Army who did not appear at the motor vehicle bureau. Williams drove the car to the bureau.

Judge Nadine Gallagher fined Glascoe $25 and dismissed the case against Williams. Police are looking for the Army private.

Girl, 17, Tells Of Rape After Visiting Bars

Man Says Intimacy Was Not Forced; Denies Changing Story

A 17-year-old girl testified yesterday in District Court that she had been raped despite her protests of being a virgin.

Rudolph Valentino Vidi, 21, who is charged with the rape, admitted the intimacy yesterday in court but denied the use of force.

The namesake of the onetime screen idol is accused of raping the girl in the rear seat of a cab near 16th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne. the night of July 21.

The girl, a pretty young blond, took the stand to sob out a denial of Vidi's claim that she submitted voluntarily. She said he struck her in the face several times before the assault and later warned her not to tell anyone what had happened.

She testified she met Vidi in the Culinary Arts Club, an after-hours club at 3135 K st. nw., two days before the alleged rape. On July 21, she said, she met him when she completed work as a sales clerk in a downtown department store.

That night, she continued, they visited several bars in which they were joined by several friends of Vidi's. One of these friends had a cab, she testified, and drove a group of them to another drinking spot near 16th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne.

She said Vidi asked her to remain with him in the cab while the others went inside. She said the assault followed.

Detective Sergt. Francis Burgess of the sex squad told the jury of 11 men and one woman that when questioned at headquarters, Vidi admitted he might have used "a little force but it didn't amount to anything."

Vidi denied making such a statement and declared the girl had yielded voluntarily.

Lawyer Protests

ABC Board Gets Illegal Arrest Case

A charge of illegal arrest enlivened a hearing of the Alchoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday in the Municipal Building.

The charge was made in the closing arguments of a session in which Myer E. Smith, retail liquor store operator at 1900 Pennsylvania ave. nw., was charged with selling liquor to an intoxicated person.

Smith's attorney, F. Joseph Donohue, said the arrest of the alleged intoxicated person was "undoubtedly an unlawful arrest." He declared that since the man, Theodore G. Holt, was arrested on the interior stairs of his home at 1914 Pennsylvania ave. nw. the arrest was unlawful without a warrant.

Smith said Holt had not been intoxicated when he entered the store, nor when the police returned him there. A store clerk, Albert Kooney, of 2900 Southern blvd., Arlington, substantiated the statement.

Three other witnesses, Mrs. Anna Ferrari of 1902 Pennsylvania ave. nw., delicatessen operator; William D. Rogers of 714 19th st. nw., who saw the police return Holt to the store, and Wesley Kitchens, 1914 Pennsylvania ave. nw., a fellow roomer, testified that Holt was sober the evening of his arrest.

Mrs. Mary K. Mason and James O'Donnell Moran of the ABC Board took the matter under advisement.

Also included in the 48 were: J. Forest Walker, chairman of the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board; Sam Rice, onetime Washington Senator baseball star, and Andrew J. Kessinger, head of the Silver Spring public parking lot program.

The jury will convene on November 10 at which time a grand jury foreman will be chosen along with 22 other grand jurors. Twenty-five will be assigned to petit jury duty.

First Women Jurors

The women will be the first in Mnotgomery County history to serve on a jury as a law passed by the last session of the General Assembly broke a long tanding tradition of all male juries in Maryland.

Reactions of the women, most of whom were interviewed yesterday, varied from statements the jury service would be "exciting" to declarations they were "too busy."

Miss Edith A. Koiner, personnel assistant, General Accounting Office, who lives in Rockville, said she thought it would be "something exciting." She was joined by Miss Esther W. Beall, a secretary at the Montgomery County Farm Bureau office, who lives at Clarksburg. "I think it's wonderful," Miss Beall said.

Most Women Approve

Mrs. Jennie C. Fulton, Poolesville, said the jury service should "open one's eyes" and she thought it would "broaden a person." Mrs. Helen H. Kerby, 114 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, whose son is executive editor of the Wall Street Journal, declared she would be willing to serve but Mrs. Jewell G. Nolan, 507 Cumberland ave., Chevy Chase, whose husband is a bee expert with the Agriculture Department, said she had been under a physician's care.

"I think it's a man's job," commented Mrs. Ethel L. Speare of Rockville, who is a receptionist at Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium.

Other women chosen were:

Mrs. Mary P. Anderson, wife of the county agricultural agent; Mrs. Zada F. Bodmer of Poolesville; Mrs. Hazel L. Beall, Rockville; Mrs. Mary Alice Perry, 11 Shepherd st.; Mrs. Eugenia Arnold, 16 Hesketh st.; Mrs. Catherine H. Turlington, 402 Warwick pl., all of Chevy Chase; Mrs. Louise E. Lyons, 9519 Clearview pl., Silver Spring; Mrs. Jane R. Knox of Glen, and Mrs. Sarah G. Sellman of Poolesville.

Karn, all of Rockville; James A. Hyslop, Silver Spring; Charles Wolfrey, Spencerville; H. Elgar Bryan, Beltsville; David H. Frederick, Spencerville; Charles W. Pawley, jr., Travilah; Charles L. Hallman, Barnesville; William J. Day, Damascus; Earl K. Linthicum, Browningsville; Burhnard S. Leisear, Albert O. Denham, Christian Kronenbitter, George W. Price, jr., and W. James Widmayer, all of Silver Spring; William F. Walker, Kensington, and Hugh O. McKinnie, Takoma Park.

Staying Warm

Western U. S. Has Snow; 82 In District

The United States had snow yesterday, but in Washington it might just as well have been the Fourth of July, what with the temperature and the fireworks.

There'll be more of same, too — both the July weather and the fireworks.

The thermometer got as high as 82 degrees, just 2 under the record of 1910. The celestial pyrotechnics, courtesy of Orion, the huntsman constellation, were visible beginning late in the evening. They could be seen better by suburbanites, whose vision was less obscured by the glow over Washington. There was no steady shower of shooting stars, only a greater frequency than usual.

Today it will be sunny again, quite warm, with temperature of 82 early in the afternoon. Yesterday's low was 55 at 3:22 a. m. The maximum of 82 came at 2:18 p. m.

The Rocky Mountain region had snow in earnest, the first general storm this fall. Denver, Colo., reported 3 inches, and a temperature of 33 degrees, with lower readings in other parts of the State. Cheyenne, Wyo., had an inch of snow, with the mercury at 28.

Tenants Fight Apartment Rent Boost

Claim Services Have 'Lessened;' 15 Per Cent Raise Is Sought

Owners do not deserve a rent increase because services at the Wisteria Mansions apartments, 1101 Massachusetts ave. nw., have "lessened" and the general character of the neighborhood is declining, tenants told a rent control examiner yesterday.

Tenants represented by Attorney Cecil A. Beasley, fought the request for average 15 per cent rent boosts during a hearing before Examiner James G. Tyson.

Present rents for the 71 Wisteria apartment units range from $42.50 to $70 per month.

Tyson said the tenants cited "loss of service" due to replacement of two manually-operated elevators by automatic elevators, and claimed needed redecoration work hadn't been done.

Bernard I. Nordlinger, attorney for owner Abraham Liebman, maintained the rent boost was needed to cover increased operating and capital improvement costs, Tyson said.

Tyson took the case under advisement.

William F. Mansfield, rent control secretary-docket clerk, disclosed that owners have petitioned for average 20 per cent rent hikes for 30 units of an apartment house at 3537 11th st. nw.

Owner Katherine B. Markwood seeks to raise $27.50-a-month apartments to $35 and $43-a-month units to $49.50, he said.

Va. Milk Price Up in Two Areas

Possibility of a jump in the price of milk in nearby Virginia was suggested last night as the State Milk Commission announced increases had been granted in the Lynchburg and Covington-Clifton Forge milk markets.

The commission, meeting in Richmond, said the new minimum rates will become effective in the Lynchburg market on November 1 and in the other market on Friday.

Consumer prices will be increased a minimum of 1 cent per quart in both markets. The rise followed hearings held recently, in which producers declared that costs of production and distribution had increased.

The Milk Commission has a hearing scheduled in Danville Friday, and decisions pending on recent hearings held in the Alexandria and Fredericksburg milk markets.

D. C. Woman Found Dead In Cell by Jail Matron

Coroner Ascribes Death of Victim, Held as Drunk, To Natural Causes

A 38-year-old woman was found dead in her cell at the District Jail yesterday, the second death in four days of a District prisoner jailed for drunkenness.

The woman was Mrs. Lillian Theresa King, 38. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of death from natural causes after an autopsy at the Morgue.

The latest death occurred on a day in which:

1. United States Attorney George Morris Fay promised to expedite his office's investigation into the death of John Forrest Bunch in answer to a request from the Commissioners that he present the case to the grand jury if he finds "the facts justify such action."

2. The District inaugurated a new method of handling persons arrested for drunkenness who may require hospital attention.

Found by Matron

Mrs. King, sister of Ed Fisher of 2410 South Dakota ave. ne., whose address she gave when arrested, was found unconscious in her cell at the District Jail at about 6 a. m. by Mrs. Grace Thompson, jail matron. She was pronounced dead at 7 a. m. by Dr. Will Kellow of Gallinger Hospital.

Dr. MacDonald performed the autopsy at the Morgue. He said Mrs. King's death resulted from heart, liver, kidney and artery complications.

Mrs. King was arrested at 3:55 p. m. Monday at 6th and G sts. nw. by Pvt. R. A. Baker, who charged her with being drunk. She was taken to the Women's Bureau.

Tuesday morning, according to police, she was examined at the morning clinic at the Women's Bureau by Dr. Truxton Morgan after she complained of being nervous. Dr. Morgan certified that she would be able to appear in court.

Mrs. King went before Municipal Judge Armond Scott. He examined her police record which shows 37 arrests since 1941, 19 of them for intoxication, and 10 jail sentences for drunkenness.

She was committed to jail for 30 days because she could not pay the $50 fine.

Given Sedative

Late Tuesday night in the jail, police said, Mrs. King complained that she had the "jikters." They said a sedative was administered by Dr. Joseph H. Early, interne assigned to the jail. She was found dead the following morning.

Mrs. King's death followed by four days that of Charles Kermit Chapman, 39, alias Charles Emmett Reynolds, in a cell at the First Precinct Sunday of pneumonia. He had been arrested on a drunk charge.

Attention was called to the handling of drunks by police by the death of 64-year-old John Forrest Bunch last August 4. He died of a fractured skull in Gallinger Hospital six days after he had been arrested for intoxication.

Although a coroner's jury returned a finding of accidental death on August 14, the family of Bunch has continued to demand a more thorough investigation into his death.

New Witness Produced

Last week the Bunch family produced a new witness, a fellow prisoner, who said Bunch had suffered a "convulsion" in his cell and police had ignored repeated cries for aid.

In reply to the Commissioners request for a grand jury probe of the Bunch case, Fay said yesterday his investigation of the case is "proceeding as expeditiously as possible."

"Your request will be given due consideration," he wrote, "as soon as the investigation is completed."

Fay would not predict when the investigation might be concluded or when the case might go before the grand jury.

The first case of a hospital admission of a prisoner arrested on a drunk charge under a new plan was recorded over night.

The prisoner, Joseph H. Reese, 38, no fixed address, was booked on a drunk charge at the First Precinct station in Municipal Center and then sent to Gallinger Hospital where he was admitted for alcoholism. His condition is not serious.

The new plan was adopted on the recommendation of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, and was worked out by police, the Health Department and the Commissioners.

Area News In Brief

Postal Employe Held On Collectors' Charges

Cash collecting proclivities of a trusted postal employe have set a number of the Nation's philatelists behind in their stamp collecting, postal inspectors revealed yesterday.

They charged the employe, Alphonse E. English, 23, of Manassas, Va., with embezzlement of money entrusted to him and with theft of letters in transit. No estimate was given of the total amount stolen or of the number of disappointed stamp collectors.

Postal Inspectors George T. Bleakley and Keith Moyer said English was arrested Tuesday night at the United State Postoffice branch at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., with three "test" letters in his pocket.

The "test" letters were sent through English, a messenger for the Postoffice Philatelic Agency, after "numerous" philatelists had complained they were not receiving special stamp issues for which they had sent cash orders, the inspectors said. Such cash orders range between $3 and $10 each, they said.

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday released English under $500 bond for a further hearing Friday to permit him to obtain counsel.

Goldberg told police a Negro of medium build, with heavy moustache, dressed in a snappy green sports coat and brown trousers, traded two rolls of coins, marked "$10—Quarters" for two $10 bills. The victim later discovered the containers held but $1.35 in wadded nickels.

Va. Hospital Construction Bids Probed

Richmond, Va., Oct. 22 (AP).—Attorney General Harvey Apperson's office said today an investigation is under way over the awarding of a three million dollar contract for new construction at the Eastern State Hospital near Williamsburg.

The State Hospital Board last Friday awarded the contract to J. Kennon Perron of Richmond at a cost-plus fee of $47,000.

The investigation was started after the Laburnum Construction Corp. filed a formal protest with the attorney general, charging that the board "certainly was not following the usual rules of the game" when it awarded the contract.

Hamilton Bryan, president of the Laburnum Corp., said his firm had submitted sealed bids and that he understood they were to be regarded "just like bids on any other job."

Bids Opened Publicly

"They were all opened by the board publicly at one time," Bryan declared, "and the bid of each contractor was read out. We were low with a bid of $48,875 as a fee for our work. The next lowest bid was from J. Kennon Perrin at $57,000. After these figures were announced, and everyone had taken them down, the contractors were called in individually to discuss a contract."

"No one said anything to me about changing the bid," Bryan continued, "or that anything was wrong with our price. We thought it very reasonable. Then the next I knew, the board had gone into a secret huddle with Mr. Perrin, he had cut his bid, and the contract had been awarded to him."

Differences Cited

A spokesman for Attorney General Apperson's office conceded that the Laburnum bid was lower than the one first submitted by the Perrin firm, but said that a substantial difference existed in the contracts as a whole.

The Laburnum protest is the second criticism field against the board's action in awarding the contract. Earlier, the Peninsula Builders Association complained to the State Health Commissioner and to Governor Tuck.

Sex Suspect's Capture Gains 3 Boys $25

Three teen-age boys were each given $25 rewards yesterday for capturing and holding an alleged sex offender until police arrived.

The boys are James D. Adelman, 18, 117 18th st. se.; John T. Reynolds, 13, 1708 A st. se., and Maurice M. Albright, 15, 1815 Burke st. se.

Their action caused the arrest on October 8 of Richard G. Quistorf, 27, whose address was given as 808 N. Wayne st., Arlington. He is now under mental observation at Gallinger Hospital after being charged with assault and indecent exposure to a 6-year-old girl.

In presenting the rewards and police courtesy cards to the three youths, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendant of police, thanked them "for a good job of helping the police department and the community."

Seen in Bushes

The boys told this story of the capture:

James and John had been fishing in Kingman Lake, and were talking near 19th and B sts. nw., when they observed Quistorf with a little girl in the bushes.

James asked Quistorf what he was doing, and received the reply, "Nothing."

Quistorf started to run with James in pursuit and 13-year-old John not far behind. A block and a half later, John grabbed Quistorf around the shoulders and knocked him down.

"I would have hit him a good block if the cement hadn't been so hard. I play football, you see," John related.

Quistorf, according to John, was saying the boys would get in trouble if they held him, when Maurice came along. Maurice had been serving newspapers in the neighborhood.

Police Arrive

Maurice stood guard while the others went to call police. Maurice said that Quistorf started to get up once, but "I pushed him hard enough to get him down again."

Police arrived some five minutes later.

The three youths are all members of the Southeast Boys Club and were invited to Police Headquarters by Lieut. Forrest L. Binswanger, in charge of youth activities.

Major Barrett commented that he has $16,000 to give out each year for such deeds. Previously, according to Major Barrett, virtually all this sum allotted to detection and prevention was turned back to the Treasury.

"I'm going to try to give it away, if I can, to citizens helping our fight against crime," said Barrett.

Salesman Is Accused Of Bigamy

Frederick, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—Morris Cramer, 32-year-old hosiery salesman, faced a two-year sentence on conviction of bigamy today after his first wife posted $1000 to have him brought back from California to face the charge.

He was arrested several weeks ago in Los Angeles. With him was the former Selina Scali, whom he married here in June of 1946. They have two children.

Cramer was extradited from California after Mrs. Yetta Cramer of Brooklyn posted the $1000 expense money.

He testified he had entered into a separation agreement with his wife a year ago and that she knew at the time he already was married.

Mrs. Yetta Cramer said on the stand she was to get $50 monthly under the separation agreement, but didn't receive it. In April, she said, she offered to give him a divorce if he would give her $5000 and an insurance policy, but he gave her non-negotiable bonds and changed the beneficiary on the insurance policy.

Cramer pleaded that at the time he married Miss Scali he thought his first wife had divorced him. He had been served with papers, he said, and learned later she abandoned the proceedings.

Cramer described himself as a former department store buyer at Buffalo.

Button Plant Arrest of 3 Protested

The civil rights division of the Department of Justice disclosed last night that it has received a complaint of violation of civil rights in the strike at the Excelsior Pearl Works, Inc., plant at Ridgely, Md.

A public relations official of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL, Will Allen, revealed that the union had filed the complaint earlier this week, charging that the arrest of two union organizers and a striking worker was illegal.

The Ridgely plant and another one operated by the same firm in Federalsburg, Md., have been struck for more than two weeks by workers seeking union recognition. During the period, the two were arrested in Ridgely where Mayor Martin Sutton swore in 40 to 50 deputies early in the strike.

The three men, all charged with disorderly conduct, are Irwin J. Jaffe, assistant regional organizer for Baltimore; Lawrence Christopher, Federalsburg plant worker, and Charles F. Tillman, jr., ILGWU organizer from Norfolk, Va. A hearing on the charges is scheduled for today at 10 a. m. in Denton, county seat of Caroline County, where both plants are located.

P-TA Officer Urges 'Sane' Foreign Policy

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 22 (AP).—"We must find the way to stop Russian aggression without an atomic war," Ralph McDonald of Washington, chairman of World Citizenship of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, asserted tonight.

"Such a war would probably end with more totalitarianism, though of a different kind," he told the annual meeting of the Cooperative Education Association, the Virginia branch of the National P-TA Congress.

McDonald, who is executive secretary of the National Education's Department of Higher Education, said the "local Parent-Teacher associations have an opportunity and a responsibility to help build a sound, sane foreign policy based upon understanding and sympathy between the peoples of the earth."

"Through this organization," he added, "we must:

"1. Demonstrate the attitudes of human fellowship, tolerance and the basing of opinions upon reason rather than passion.

"2. Turn back the cries of those who say that war is the only solution of the Russian problem.

"3. Support the United Nations by studying it, examining it and building public faith in it."

At the outset of his address he said that "We must recognize the futility and folly of a third World War. Recently we have witnessed a growing feeling that war is inevitable," that Russia and the United States must ultimately fight, with the nations of the world divided into two camps of allies.

Tomorrow's principal speaker will be Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington, member of the executive committee of the Virginia Council of Health and Medical Care. The three-day meeting will end tomorrow afternoon.

11 Testify At Hearing For Policeman

Frederick, Md., Oct. 22 (Spl.).—A hearing by the Frederick City Police Commission on charges of dereliction of duty against Police Lieut. Reno O. Six will be resumed Monday.

In a resumption of the hearing which opened September 29, the commission last night received testimony from 11 witnesses in a five-hour session. Additional witnesses will be called next week.

The charges against Lieutenant Six were preferred by Sergt. Daniel E. Swomley, who was the complainant in similar accusations against Chief Frederick M. Straley. Straley was exonerated in a hearing several weeks ago.

As in previous hearings, last night's proceedings were conducted privately. Among witnesses were City Attorney Richard E. Zimmerman, John L. Shaw, local housing official; Lewis Renn, a Frederick carpenter; Isaac Hankey, a radio technician, and seven members of the police department.

Nature of the testimony was not disclosed, but it was learned that Sergeant Swomley opened the session by testifying in his own behalf. All other witnesses were summoned by Lieutenant Six.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—Marion S. Moberly, 85, for 33 years court crier and law librarian for the Frederick County Circuit Court, died today after a long illness.

He was the oldest public officeholder in Frederick County on the basis of his years of service and liked to recall that he rang the old courthouse bell both on Armistice Day in 1918 and at the end of World War II in 1945.

The court term last May was the first in three decades that he had not been able to carry out his official duties and since then he had failed steadily.

$5000 Solomons Isle Bargain Scrutinized by Md. Officials

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 22.—A group of State architects will make a study of the "big bargain" Maryland has acquired in the Navy's Solomons Island amphibious base, John E. Clark, chairman of the Board of Natural Resources, announced today.

Approximately 20 architects who plan buildings and improvements for State institutions will leave tomorrow aboard the State ship Potomac for Solomons, under guidance of Chief Engineer John B. Funk.

Clark said State officials had signed the agreement with the Navy to take over the base, whose value once was estimated at 12 million dollars, and which the State received for $5000.

The only string the Navy attached to the deal was that of maintaining certain buildings on the site, and the right to take over in case of war.

Funk told the Board of Public Works over $100,000 worth of salvageable property is on the base, which covers 117 acres and has 119 buildings.

Killed Wife When She Refused Him Job, Police Told

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 22 (AP).—Detective Lieut. L. B. Warren said today that Nick Fotes-Nicholas, 55, had signed a statement admitting the fatal shooting of his wife because she refused to give him a job in her restaurant.

Mrs. Catherine Nicholas, 46, was shot to death at their West Charleston home last night in the presence of a daughter, Evangeline, 24, Warren reported. A younger daughter was in adjoining room while a son, Jimmy, 22, was approaching the house and rushed in to grapple with his father, the officer, added.

Warren said Fotes-Nicholas related in his statement that ill health caused him to sell the restaurant to his wife and daughter, Evangeline, in 1943.

"After about three months," the statement continued, "I got well and went to my wife and asked for a job and she said she no want me. I got tired of loafing."

Warren said a murder charge has been lodged against the man.

Thank You Tapestries

Man o' War Brings Art From France

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

IT ISN'T OFTEN that a man o' war cargoes needlework! But on November 1 when the French cruiser Georges Leygues docks in New York, some one hundred and ninety-eight tapestries will be lashed firmly in the hold. The tapestries are so valuable they lack value. They're irreplaceable and no one, in these days of oscillating currencies, can even approximate their cost. That's why the French government is sending them 'cross-ocean on a cruiser. (Incidentally, it's the greatest movement of art works to cross the Atlantic.)

Right on the dock the cruiser's commander and Ambassador Bonnet will turn them over to New York's Mayor William O'Dwyer. Then they'll be rushed to the Metropolitan Museum where a special wing has been cleared to exhibit the masterpieces properly. The official opening will take place amidst more than usual pomp and circumstance November 21.

The tapestries have been exhibited in Paris and London, are sent here as an official "thanks" gesture for our wartime and present assistance to France. The tapestries represent a complete history of France's very special art of tapestry weaving.

Famous Tapestries

PERHAPS the most famous is a series, "L'Apocalypse d'Anger," ordered by a Duc d'Angou, which took over a century to complete. They were bequeathed to the Anger Cathedral in the fifteenth century by the King of Anjou and Provence.

A second series, almost as famous, is "La Dame a la Licorne," which has the wonderful blue "mille fleur" background against which the lady figures are surrounded by different animals representing the chief human qualities.

The most modern tapestries were designed by Lurcat and Gromiere. Unfortunately, the exhibition can't come to Washington, but there's a chance it'll be taken to Chicago.

Art Editor

WHILE we're still dabbling in art, we bet no one suspects Mrs. Andre Visson of leading a double life. Most Washingtonians know Assia as a gentle hostess who entertains her husband's literary, social and political friends, serves them food equal to their stimulating conversation.

Actually, though she never mentions it, she works an eight-hour day as executive editor of the Gazette des Beaux-Arts, the world's oldest art magazine—and she's been on the job for 17 years.

The Gazette was founded by Charles Blanc in 1859 and was taken over by George Wildenstein, who owns the distinguished New York gallery, in 1929. Mr. Wildenstein, as it's easy to guess, makes a hobby of writing books on art but he's kept the Gazette completely uncommercial. It's a real monument of art history and is devoted to archeological subjects and new, unpublished research as well as art.

Talk naturally turned to politics when three feminine leaders in the GOP went into a huddle yesterday at the D. C. League of Republican Women's tea honoring new members. In the group are (left to right) Mrs. Carroll Reece, wife of the National Chairman of the Republican Committee;

G.O.P. League Is Entertained By Mrs. Reece

By Genevieve Reynolds

All the optimism and high spirits of a preelection rally prevailed yesterday when the District of Columbia League of Republican Women honored its new members with a gala tea at the Sulgrave Club. Mrs. Carroll Reece, wife of the chairman of the Republican National Committee, was hostess at the colorful event which was attended by more than 300 GOP women and their guests.

Receiving with Mrs. Reece were Mrs. Joseph Farrington, wife of the Delegate from Hawaii who is president of the District League; Mrs. Addison B. Green, president, National Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, who came down from her home in Holyoke, Mass., for the party; Mrs. Guy D. Goff of New York, mother of Mrs. Reece, and wife of the late Senator Goff of West Virginia, and Mrs. John B. Veach, membership chairman of the local league.

Taking turns at the tea table were Mrs. Homer Ferguson, wife of the Michigan Senator; Mrs. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, wife of the Senator from Iowa; Mrs. Everett M. Dirksen, wife of the Illinois Representative.

Still others dispensing beverages were Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. William S. Red Danger In S. America, Says Writer

While the United States is worrying about communism in Europe and Asia, the Red threat should not be overlooked in Latin America. So warned Edward Tomlinson, radio commentator and author of a recent book, "Battle for the Hemisphere," in a dinner speech last night before members of National Capital chapter, Theta Sigma Phi—national professional journalism fraternity for women.

"Communistic groups in Latin America are still in the minority," explained Tomlinson, "but they cannot be ignored."

He said that Communists support or ignore dictators—mostly the former. The Communists know that dictators create a totalitarian setup made to order for the Reds to carry on when they become strong enough to take over.

Tomlinson cited Brazil and Chile as two of the democratic countries, with freedom of press and speech, in South America. "Costa Rica in Central America," he said, "has one of the most democratic systems in the world and is very proud that it has more school teachers than policemen, and one of the most literate populations in the world."

Discussing the economic role of the United States in Latin America, Tomlinson asserted, "we should be neither exploiters or a Santa Claus.

"We should encourage private enterprise everywhere and restrict loans to governments," he continued, "except when needed in emergencies. If we encourage private enterprises we will promote democracy and, thus keep power out of the hands of politicians."

As for political relations with Latin America, he said that the United States should observe a scrupulous noninterference policy in internal affairs but at the same time should refuse cooperation with extremist parties—left or right.

Mrs. Longworth on Hand To Hear Movie Probe

By Marie McNair

ONE OF THE faithful galleryites at the House Committee on Un-American Activities hearings is Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of a President of the United States, wife of the late Speaker of the House.

She was there yesterday listening intently to every word that was said, joining in the occasional laughter which broke out through the packed room. Incidentally "Princess Alice" hasn't yet succumbed to the new hemline. Her trim navy blue suit worn with the same style felt hat which she has made her own particular fashion, showed a good 15 inches of her slim legs.

Mrs. George Mesta dropped in after lunching at the Mayflower and says she's going back today. Also there was vivacious Mildred Pepper, wife of the Florida Senator, who had with her Mrs. Edward McKinney Hunt, a neighbor at 1661 Crescent pl. Both ladies were in black, Mrs. Pepper with glycerine ostrich on her wee hat, and Mrs. Hunter wearing a black moire suit.

Handsome Mrs. Paul McNutt, all in hunters green, was there to hear her equally handsome husband speak his piece as attorney for the movie industry.

And, with a Churchillian cigar jutting from his lips, portly Rupert Hughes, famous author, called from Hollywood to testify, sat far forward in his seat, in order to hear every word.

Tonight Mr. Hughes will be guest of honor at a buffet supper to be given by Mrs. Martin Vogel at her home on Thirtieth st. Sharing honors with him will be Gen. and Mrs. Clayton Adams, the latter a niece of the hostess.

Conforming to President Truman's food program, Lillie Vogel will serve no meat or poultry at her party. There will be salmon, plenty of vegetables and a dessert. And the table decorations will be fruit and vegetables, plus a lighted pumpkin which Mrs. Vogel carved out herself.

Did you know that Rupert Hughes is probably the greatest authority on George Washington now living? He's written several volumes on our first President, is still busy compiling more data on his life.

TOWN TOPICS:

They're saying in New York that handsome Orrin Lehman, nephew of Former Governor Lehman, has solved the problem of how Lady Iris Mountbatten can remain in this country. It is via the orange blossom path. Mr. Lehman, who was so badly shot up in the war, is said to be furnishing an apartment under the supervision of the lovely Iris, great-granddaughter of Queen Victoria.

Col. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson are planning a trip to South America to visit Chile, where Colonel Culbertson served as our Ambassador several years ago. They'll leave on November 8, going first down the west coast and then up the east coast, stopping along the way where they have friends. They'll be back before Christmas, expecting to arrive by the 15th.

Valentina Costumes Cleopatra

Valentina, who each fall makes some sort of fashion news with the clothes she designs for a Broadway star, is at it again. This time she is making the costumes (in modern fashion) of Shakepeare's "Anthony and Cleopatra" in which Katharine Cornell will star.

While the first fittings are in progress there is still very little news about the clothes, but Valentina does reveal that they are not Egyptian costumes, but modern fashion with Egyptian overtones. Cleopatra at the time of the play is a woman of 39, unhappily in love and a the losing end of a war.

We Outdo the French

Paris' Longer Skirt Styles Adopted With Inches to Spare

By Peggy Preston

IT IS AN old American prerogative to do things in a big way. And that is just what we have done with the "longer" skirt idea which Paris introduced some time ago. Today we are wearing the longest skirts in the world and France is running a poor second in the hemline race.

That was the opinion expressed yesterday by two fashion-wise women, recently returned from Paris, and speaking before members of Washington's Fashion Group luncheon at the Washington Hotel.

They were Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, and Dora Loues Miller, head of the New York office International Fashions. Both agreed that they have seen longer skirts and more general acceptance of extreme styles in New York than they did on the other side of the Atlantic.

Wears Her Illustration

Mme. Bonnet, wearing a brown costume made by French designer Christian Dior, pointed to her own ensemble for illustration. "You see, a French frock can be quite conservative. This one has no padding in the shoulders, has a slim skirt of medium length and a flared peplum." She admitted to wearing one of the tiny "waist minimizers" that are recommended by both Paris and New York. "I assure you it is quite comfortable. Also it makes one stand up straighter."

There is no controversy or friction between the dress industries of America and France, according to Mme. Bonnet. Instead, they complement one another.

"France, designing for individual tastes and a small select group of women, can afford to be creative. We can provide the inspiration for your designers," she said. "Your country, on the other hand, with its great industrial power to turn out millions of ready-made clothes a year, can be an equal source of inspiration to France. I would very much like to see more inexpensive, ready-made clothing in French stores. It would be a boon to women who cannot afford to buy from the custom houses."

Mme. Bonnet stated that American buyers who obtain originals from the Paris dress market, do France a great service in that they leave dollars with which her country can buy wheat and coal to aid in the rebuilding of the land.

The Iowa Viewpoint

Miss Miller, who spent many months in France, spoke on "French Fashion from the Iowa Point of View."

"If you are realistic you know that French fashions help us economically," she said. "American manufacturers, with a great investment in wholesale cutting, cannot afford to experiment with patterns. They must not make a mistake. So, when they go abroad to purchase new radically different dress models that are being accepted by a select group of women, they are saving themselves both time and money. If the chic women who patronize the Paris salons like a dress, they can be sure it will go over in a $19.95 version."

Miss Miller reported a great increase in American buying in Paris last summer. She showed her audience an interesting little collection of "gadgets" which she brought back to this country with her. Included were white collar and cuff sets of intricate design, scarfs and a delightful "windbreaker," or hood, made by Balmain.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Husband, Youthful at 51, Spoils Marriage For His Wife by Including His Father, 85, In All Their Social Activities Nowadays

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are married 26 years, very happily. We have four children, two of whom are married.

At 51, my husband is very young for his age and we go out a great deal, enjoying life to the full—or did until two years ago, since when my husband insists on taking his father wherever we go.

His father, 85, a widower, lives by himself in an apartment. He takes his meals with us and spends much time in our home, which I don't mind; but when it comes to going out, I'd rather not have him along.

My hus' and, on the other hand, won't take a step outside without him, or if he does, he acts miserable. He seems to have a complex on this score, which started two years ago when his brother and sister moved East, washing their hands of the father except for a letter now and then.

Father's Had Four Wives

THE FATHER has been married four times, each of his wives having died, and he has been a widower now for six years. He has no friends or companions his own age, never goes anywhere unless we take him, looks to my husband for companionship and accepts all his invitations.

I didn't mind his being along at first; but when it became a daily practise I began to resent it. I expressed myself to my husband in a very nice way, and he is intelligent enough to understand my feelings, but he won't go out without his father and pouts if I make any complaints.

So far, I've been very patient about the whole thing, but I intend to stop going out with them altogether if my husband doesn't see the light. If his father isn't smart enough to realize that he shouldn't impose, what else can I do? I feel that one must draw the line somewhere. Something must be done; and I shall appreciate your advice. G. R.

Wife's Attitude Is Off the Beam

DEAR G. R.: Two years ago, your ebullient husband decided to show his father a good time to the best of his ability in the old gentleman's declining years.

Possibly his decision was sparked by vague remorse for past quasi-neglect that dawned on him after his brother and sister departed for the East, leaving the father to his own devices.

So he started giving father a social whirl—that being your husband's idea (also yours)—of enjoying life to the full. And had you cordially seconded the motion, making a partnership lark of it, instead of throwing up resistance almost immediately—as I'm sure you did—doubtless one or the other of the two men sooner or later would have "begged off" the threesome alliance as a steady practice.

She Drives Men To Common Cause

ALAS, your smouldering annoyance has caused both men to get their back up in defiance of it. They're busy now trying to prove to their reciprocal satisfaction that no woman can come between them.

Moreover, I suppose your husband feels under special compulsion to be twice-nice to his father, to compensate for your manifestly ungracious attitude; just as I daresay the father—now somewhat childish—sets most store by such plums of pleasure as you would flatly deny him.

In other words, more by instinct than conscious conspiracy, the men are making common cause against your unsporting behavior. Unwittingly you've driven your husband into the father's camp.

By and large, the problem derives from your self-centered childish nature and selfish proprietary attitude toward your husband. You seem to regard him an exclusive accessory to your enjoyment of life.

Given maturity of spirit and a true concept of wifehood, you would emotionally identify yourself with his latterday attempts to "do right" by his father, and go along with the experience sympathetically—as just one more chapter in a closely knit marriage. M. H.

TOMORROW: To man's dismay, otherwise charming lady whom he greatly admires trades probing glances with chaps she doesn't know.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

All Milk Diet Won't Sustain Growing Baby

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

One of the common problems of the child past one year of age is when he is reluctant to eat food and demands quantities of milk to satisfy his appetitie.

Quite often mothers express their contentment with this situation by saying: "Oh, I don't worry because he gets lots of milk." They should worry. Long before the first year of age the child has an increasing need for the nutrition provided by cereal, fruits, vegetables, meat, eggs and foods compounded of these. Milk is a necessary part of a good diet, but it is far from being the whole of it.

If the nourishment of the milk itself could be cut down, the baby would be inspired by hunger to accept other foods. This can be done in two ways. If the milk is rich in cream, it could be skimmed. The appetiteless child profits by being given skimmed milk until such time as the appetite is revived. Though a highly rich milk is never advisable for infant or child feeding, some cream provides nutrition and vitamins which are essential. So, continue the skimmed milk only until such time as the child is able to eat and drink milk both in adequate amounts.

For the baby who awakens at night to be fed, the amount of milk in the bottle should be decreased. Since the eight ounces seen necessary to him, make part of this water and the rest milk. Then by the next night make it three-fourths boiled water and one-fourth milk.

The object is to wean the child from night feeding so he will have an appetite for the good and filling foods he will get in the daytime. Skimming the milk or diluting the milk will both serve this purpose. Then make sure the night meal is a hearty one, so there will be no hunger pangs to waken the child and inspire him to want to feast on milk.

Helpful Hints for Homemaker

If that old down quilt looks particularly faded and shabby this winter, why not park it in the closet during the daytime and just bring it out at night when needed? Beds look far better without quilts at the end of them anyway and a shabby, half-soiled one takes away all the daintiness of the bedroom.

When using cards from a recipe file, pull the card up from the file so it can be read but still remain in the file. Then you cannot possibly get it soiled from any of the cooking preparations. The weight of the supporting cards will keep it erect.

If the flowers in your last year's cretonnes have faded, buy a box of waxed crayons and tint up each flower to its original shade. You will be surprised the difference it will make.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

I pressed a new black velvet dress too hard, and have a shiny mark on the skirt. What should I do to remove it? R. R. B.

Hold the spot over steam (from the spout of a tea kettle) and then brush it, using quick, light motions. Use a soft brush for this. Velvet should never be pressed, but should be steamed to remove wrinkles. A good home method for doing this is to hang the garment in a bathroom, turn on the hot water until the room is filled with steam, and close the door. When the garment is removed from the steamy bathroom it should be given time to dry thoroughly before wearing.

I have a pair of andirons that were originally brass, but have become quite blackened. I have tried several types of brass polish, but cannot remove the black coating. Is there any type of cleaner that would take this off? Would steel wool be harmful? M. E. C.

Fine steel wool should not be harmful to your brass and its use would be the quickest way to restore them to brightness. Also, rubbing them with a dampened cloth which has been dipped in cleaning powder should help.

1. Can you tell me how to get rust and black stains off Mexican tin trays? I have heard that the Mexicans use silver in making this tin, but am dubious about this fact. I have used scouring pads with soap in them, steel wool and metal polish, but with very little success.

2. The drainboards in our kitchen are covered with inlaid linoleum. Mold got into the linoleum and seems to have penetrated down beyond the surface, causing black stains. Can this be removed without scraping the entire surface of the linoleum down fairly deep?

3. Sometime last spring you had a column of recipes showing the use of lemon in cooking desserts. You have one recipe which was like a pudding, the top forming a sponge and the bottom a lemon custard. The younger members of my family were very fond of it and we had it frequently. However, the recipe was lost while I was away during the summer. Could you repeat? E. M. W.

1. It seems you have exhausted possibilities for removing the stains at home. If these trays are valued possessions, I would suggest you take them to an expert metal repair man. Look under "Platers—metal" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

2. You might try removing the black spots from the linoleum by using a special floor cleaner. This will only remove them if the moisture did not penetrate beyond the surface. If it has soaked entirely through to the base of the linoleum, replacing it or that part of it, is the only answer.

3. Here is the recipe for the lemon pudding:

3 tablespoons flour
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk grated rind and juice of 2 lemons

Separate whites from yolks of eggs, beat yolks, add sugar, flour, salt and milk. Whip whites until stiff and fold into above mixture. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees F.

1. I would like to finish an unpainted bookcase in walnut. Would you please tell me how this should be done?

2. I also have an occasional chair, the wood on which is a light finish, which I would like to change to walnut. Could this be done successfully at home and if so, how?

3. How can I remove old paint which has been splashed on a varnished door?

4. My husband accidentally spilled apricot juice on a pair of trousers. Even after repeated dry cleaning, the stain remains. Can this be removed? J. W. S.

1. Sand the bookcase until smooth. To give it a walnut color, use a pigmented walnut oil stain. Brush it on the cleanly sanded wood, let stand 10 minutes and wipe off excess stain with a cloth. When thoroughly dry, apply two or three coats of varnish to seal the stain, sanding down each coat when it is dried to give it a soft finish. Then wax.

2. To change the light finished chair to walnut, remove all finish with a paint or varnish remover. Sand down until the surface is smooth and clean, then proceed as above.

3. Sometimes, with care, paint can be scraped off without damaging the varnish. After taking as much off this way as possible, sponge the spot with turpentine. If this doesn't remove the spot, complete refinishing of the door would be necessary.

4. I'm afraid there isn't anything which will remove a spot which has not been removed in cleaning several times. Perhaps the trousers could be dyed a darker color.

'Peace Plate'

Here is the "Peace Plate" menu for poultryless-eggless Thursday, as suggested by Citizens Food Committee:

Barbecued Frankfurters
Hashed Brown Potatoes
Cooked Spinach Carrot Sticks
Fresh Fruit Cheese, Crackers
Milk for the Children
Coffee or Tea for Grownups

Directions for barbecuing the frankfurters follow:

2 tablespoons fat
½ cup minced onion
½ teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons granulated sugar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
3 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
3 tablespoons catchup
2 tablespoons vinegar
4 frankfurters

Melt fat, add onion, and simmer until tender. Then add next 7 ingredients. Make a lengthwise slit 3 inches long through the center of each frankfurter. Arrange in a baking pan, slit side up, and pour sauce over all. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 20 minutes, basting several times. Serves 4.

Take Up Less Room

When the back yard of the home is small and appears crowded on washdays, it is wise to hang the heavy underwear and other large garments on cheap wooden coat hangers. They can be hooked sidewise on the line, taking up less space and drying in better shape.

Mrs. Lawrence Post, 20-year-old candidate for Miss Homecoming at George Washington University, pours a cup of coffee for her husband before they start out for morning classes

Veterans Club Candidate

'Miss Homecoming' Nominee Already Has Laurels as 'Mrs.'

By Bessie Hackett

Only married woman abong the 16 candidates for queen of George Washington University's homecoming festivities next weekend is pretty, 20-year-old Lynn McKelvy Post. Her veteran husband, Lawrence Post, a senior medical student, thinks she deserves a special crown as homemaker, too.

Besides being the loveliest thing he's ever looked at, carrying a full schedule as a junior at George Washington, keeping a spotless apartment and making her own clothes, this wonder girl, boasts her husband, always has supper ready when he comes home around 5:30 p. m. And it's good, too!

"I know many different ways to use ground meat," bubbled Lynn, who learned to cook since her marriage two years ago. "There's Spanish rice, meat loaf, chili con carne, stuffed peppers, and meat balls with lots of sauce," she enumerated, adding wisely, "The whole trick is in the seasoning."

Budget Time—and Money

Like most married couples going to school, the Posts have a lot of budgeting to do—both with time and money.

Starting her day at 6:45 a. m., Lynn has breakfast on the table by the time Lawry is shaved and dressed. After he's gone, she does the dishes, straightens and dusts their one-room apartment before dashing off to a 9 a. m. class. On the way home at noon, armed with menus planned for several days ahead, she does her marketing, a little each day. Lately, Lawry has been coming home for midday meals. "It's cheaper," they agree.

In addition to studying and regular routine tasks, Lynn tries to get one big household job done each afternoon—cleaning the Venetian blinds, the laundry, ironing, etc. "Lawry's shirts are one thing I don't tackle myself," Lynn admits.

Supper usually includes a casserole dish—scalloped potatoes, cabbage, macaroni and cheese. "They're nice and inexpensive," explains this youthful home manager. Cakes and pastries are in Lawry's department—his hobby is baking.

Symphonies on Program

About once every three weeks the Post's take in a movie, but are partial to symphony concerts, which they don't consider an extravagance. Lawry, an accomplished violinist, at one time was an understudy in the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Lynn plays the marimba and flute.

His wife's ability wtih the sewing machine is a dollar-saving talent of which Lawry is extremely proud.

Lawry, who hails from Milwaukee and served as a hospital corpsman in the Navy, met his wife-to-be in Washington in the spring of 1945. A native of Blairsville, Pa., she was working for the FBI.

"We lived in the same block," dimples Lynn, "but we met on a bus while I was going to work and he was on his way to school. We saw each other every day, and finally he spoke up. Six months later we were married."

Attending the University of Wisconsin with Lawry this past summer, Lynn was chosen prom queen from 86 contestants. Previously, while a student at Ohio Weslyn, she was her sorority's entry for beauty queen.

A Scotch-Irish lassie with fair skin, blue eyes and wavy brown hair, she is the George Washington Veterans Club candidate for Miss Homecoming. The winner—selected by Earl Carroll, Harry Conover, Paul Hesse and the editors of Pic magazine—will be announced and crowned at the ball to be held November 1 in the National Guard Armory.

Given in marriage by her brother, Milo Casey, the bride wore white satin made with a basque waist, sweetheart neckline outlined in pearls and a bouffant skirt. Her illusion veil fell from a seed pearl coronet and she carried a bouquet of ivy, white roses, stephanotis and orchids.

Mrs. A. R. Rhoads of Detroit, the bride's sister, was matron of honor wearing aqua taffeta. She carried chrysanthemums.

Roger Casey was best man and the ushers were F. H. Neufeld and Arthur Lloyd. A reception was held afterward in the church parlors.

Mrs. Bernatowicz was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, James E. Mills of Cincinnati, Ohio. She wore white satin, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, a finger-tip veil trimmed in seed pearls and she carried white roses and satin streamers.

The maid of honor, Miss Corinne Kirchner, wore pink net and Miss Mable Dye, the bridesmaid, wore blue. Both carried chrysanthemums and wore bands of the flowers in their hair.

Forest Fires Under Control In Maryland

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—State Forester H. C. Buckingham said today "the Maryland forest fire situation is under control—thanks to the fact that the wind has been low."

"If the wind should rise, we would be as badly off as New England, because the woods are extremely dry now," he added.

He reported about 15 acres were burned over in the entire State yesterday, three each in Garrett, Baltimore and Anne Arundel Counties and the rest scattered.

The Department of Forest and Parks has 27 regular and 12 temporary fire guards on duty now.

"We have been running down every smoke," Buckingham said. "That seems to be the worst of our troubles at the moment. And it appears that the chief cause of the fires we have is cigarettes.

"We would like to have no burning of brush or debris at all in the daytime during this hazardous season. Such burning should be done only with good clearance, since whirlwinds are apt to develop now and they can carry coals a good distance."

Buckingham said there were no fires of consequence reported today.

Maryland to Speed Weather, Road Reports

Baltimore, Oct. 22 .—The Baltimore Weather Bureau and the Maryland State police are working on a plan to speed weather reports to all sections of the State over the police teletype network.

George N. Brancato, meteorologist in charge of the Weather Bureau, and Col. Beverly Ober, superintendent of State police, said their objective is to make weather and road reports from all parts of the State quickly available.

Brancato said the reports should be of great value to farmers and trucking concerns.

County agents will have the job of making the weather reports available to the public.

Adm. Holloway Eases Rules For Middies

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 22 (AP).—Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., Naval Academy superintendent, announced today that first-class midshipmen may take libery every other weekend, a privilege new in the history of the institution.

The easing of restrictions is in line with Admiral Holloway's avowed purpose of "liberalizing" life at the Academy.

Last spring he increased the quota of free weekends from two to four each term.

The senior middies also will be permitted "town liberty" late every afternoon within a 7-mile radius of the Academy, and may ride in—but not drive—automobiles.

As before, alcoholic beverages are taboo within the town liberty area. Law forbids serving midshipmen drinks within a 5-mile radius, but it's up to them to abstain in the extra 2-mile fringe.

First classmen now may visit classmates for a period beyond taps inspection and hereafter they won't be assigned to the "awkward squad" at drill. This is the outcast squad, where demerits must be marched off under heavy equipment.

Second classmen are in on the benefits, too. If their studies are up to standard, they may have one weekend liberty a term and town liberty every Wednesday afternoon.

Still under wraps with restricted pleasure jaunts are the third classmen and plebes.

Man Arrested For Robberies Admits 3 Killings

Pikeville, Ky., Oct. 22 (AP).—State and Federal officers said here today that Paul John Schneider, 24, admitted he had robbed several service stations in California, Colorado and Michigan and had killed three of the attendants.

Chief Deputy Pike County Sheriff Robert B. Doak said Schneider admitted robbing and slaying a service station attendant at Denver and two others in the Detroit area between September 21 and October 8. Schneider was quoted as admitting also that he had robbed two Los Angeles stations September 16 and had abducted an attendant, H. V. Quindt, and later took a quantity of cash and automobile accessories in a burglary at Lonoke Motors Co., Lonoke, Ark.

Schneider, identified as a dishonorably discharged soldier, had been sought in conection with the robbery-slaying of Frank J. Ford, 46, Denver, and Donald Dusseau, 28, and James R. Hall, 21, service station attendants in the Detroit area.

Schneider was arrested after cashing a check on a Denver bank which bore the signature, Frank J. Ford.

Eisenhower to Visit In Old Home Town

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will visit his home State of Kansas this weekend.

The Army announced yesterday that the chief of staff will fly to Manhattan tomorrow to visit Kansas State College, of which his brother Milton Eisenhower is president, and participate in a program arranged by the college.

"While there," said the announcement, "he will take advantage of the opportunity to visit his home town of Abilene, Kans. He will return to Washington by air Monday."

Official to See Airborne Jeep Demonstration

More than 300 Army, Navy and Government officials will be guests today at a demonstration of airborne military vehicles — all jeeps — developed by Willys-Overland.

The demonstration, to be held at 11 a. m. on a farm 8 miles southeast of Washington, will feature a jeep, capable of being dropped by parachute for light reconnaissance purposes in wartime.

Guests attending the demonstration will be transported there from Independence ave. and 2d st. sw., at 10:30 a. m.

Gin Rummy Players Get Some Late Visitors

Dr. A. Harry Ostrow of 2869 McGill ter. nw. and Harry S. Wender of 6432 31st pl. nw. are friends. And both like gin rummy.

So when Mrs. Ostrow and Mrs. Wender happened to be out of town on the same night, the result was inevitable.

The two men found themselves sitting on Dr. Ostrow's porch, with the wee-hour silence broken only by infrequent murmurs of "how's three points?"

Suddenly an auto swung down the deserted street and turned into the Ostrow driveway. Two figures emerged from behind the glare of headlights and approached the house.

"They're nobody I know."

"It couldn't be a holdup—one of them is a woman."

"Maybe it's an emergency case for you, Doc."

"At this hour?"

The strange couple were at the front door by then, and the man explained their mission quickly.

"Hate to disturb you, folks, but we're looking for a loaf of bread and eight eggs. We're on a scavenger hunt."

ADD NAMES

George F. Shivers of 1931 Columbia pike, Arlington, Va., is another who refuses to be outdone by John Ball and his list of Agriculture's Days, Knights, etc. Says George:

"If the 28 Walkers in our Department of National Defense directory decided to take the two Walks provided, they'd discover that it might require eight Days and three Knights.

"They might also encounter the seven Snows and one Frost. And since there aren't enough Vests to go around (only three) it's obvious that some of them will get the Shivers."

ASSIGNMENT

Mrs. Felix Belair, jr., of 118 S. Fairfax st., Alexandria, Va., wonders whether I can arrange with Weebee the Weatherbird to make this Saturday a nice day.

Mrs. Belair is one of 50 Alexandria women who have formed themselves into the Auxiliary Board of the Alexandria Hospital.

Each year the board sponsors a tour of historic Alexandria houses, and this year the tour will be held on Saturday, from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m.

If the girls get a break on the weather, as they did last year, they hope to raise another thousand dollars for the hospital. So Weebee has promised to concentrate on nothing but sunshine for the weekend.

(Tickets may be purchased Saturday morning at the George Mason Hotel. They're $2 each.)

OOPS! WRONG PAGE

Clara S. Dick of 521 E. 15th st., Chester, Pa., informs me:

"The Washington Post is very popular here in Chester. Since we work in a Government office, the Federal Diary seems like a daily letter from headquarters."

Wait a minute. That's the wrong quotation. Let Kluttz handle his own publicity.

Here's the part I want. Miss Dick says:

"Dr. L. P. Wyman of Chester is a friend of mine who has written many books for boys. One was called 'The Lakeside Boys.' It is now out of print, and the author himself doesn't have a copy.

"Dr. Wyman would like to get a copy for his grandson. Do any of your District Liners know where the author can get his own book?"

WEEBEE IS INSULTED

Permit me to deny the rumor that I serve as the model when Dave Groves draws his Weatherbird.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

R. B. wonders whether people who invent such names as "mooseburger" and "cheeseburger" are under the impression that "hamburger" is made of ham.

PERSONAL NOTES

To my semianonymous correspondent from Arlington, Va.: Yes, I am indeed interested in the Arlington bus signs which request passengers to stand behind the white line so that the driver will have "unobstructable" vision. I am also interested in seeing a printed version of your name. The signature is more intriguing than it is enlightening.

HOLD OUT

Mrs. Fred Rinehardt of 1708 R st. se., writes that she enjoys this column, but "the mister hasn't been converted yet."

Come now, Fred. What's happened to the good judgment you displayed when you asked this fine woman to marry you?

(If Fred answers "I've still got it," he's going to win himself an argument).

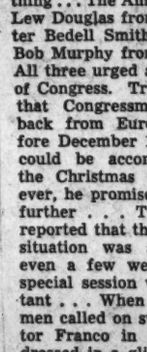
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Poultryless Thursday Mixup

By Drew Pearson

Trouble over poultryless Thursday might have been avoided had the White House let one hand know what the other hand was doing. On the Sunday afternoon President Truman made his food-saving appeal to the Nation, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson sat outside the door of Press Secretary Ross, waiting to get a chance to see the boss's speech.



But the chance never came. Poultryless Thursday was announced without benefit of advice from United States agricultural experts who had been studying her majesty the hen for weeks, were convinced that more chicken should be eaten, rather than less . . . Later, Chuck Luckman, harassed and unenvied food czar, was asked to accept a compromise proposal whereby the public was urged to eat stewing hens . . . Biggest food problem still remains grain fed on the farm. It's disappearing at an alarming rate.

Ambassadorial Report

Three top Ambassadors reported to the President last week that there would be no war with Russia, though a serious incident in Germany where U. S.-Russian troops are cheek-and-jowl could start almost anything . . . The Ambassadors were: Lew Douglas from London, Walter Bedell Smith from Moscow, Bob Murphy from Germany . . . All three urged a special session of Congress. Truman countered that Congressmen couldn't be back from European trips before December 1, and not much could be accomplished during the Christmas holidays. However, he promised to consider it further . . . The Ambassadors reported that the European food situation was so critical that even a few weeks saved by a special session would be important . . . When U. S. Congressmen called on swaggering Dictator Franco in Madrid, he was dressed in a glittering admiral's uniform on the necessity of preparing people for democracy. The solons who bearded the dictator in his den were Karl Mundt of South Dakota, Walter Judd of Minnesota and Lawrence Smith of Wisconsin . . . Latin-American diplomats to the United Nations who usually get plenty of advice from their North American diplomatic brethren so far haven't received any tips on how to vote on Palestine. Quoth U. S. Delegate Herschel Johnson: "Search your hearts and minds and take your own moral position" . . . Secret cables to the State Department report that the Norwegian government has its own way of dealing with Commies. The cabinet has decided to abolish the Communist Party if Norwegian Communists join the nine-power Comintern.

Purely Political

The Democratic National Committee has now engaged 500 rooms in San Francisco hotels for next July. This means that for the first time in two decades the Democrats will move to the far West. It was President Truman himself who insisted on this. Democratic leaders argued that Eastern radio listeners couldn't hear the speeches after 8 p. m. Pacific Time, which would be 11 p. m. Eastern Time . . . Truman, however, ruled that in order to win, it was necessary to carry California. So he has decided California is to have a good look at the Democrats.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
